STALIN'S CONDITION STILL GRAVE

Cabinet, Party Leaders Take Soviet Reins

Russian Capital Blanketed In Grief

MOSCOW, Thursday, March 4 (AP) — Russia's millions still waited for new word early today on the condition of their paralyzed and speechless leader, Joseph Stalin.

There was speculation outside Russia that Stalin already may have died and Soviet leaders are delaying the announcement.

The Council of Ministers (cabinet) of the USSR and the Communist party's Central Committee announced that they were "guiding" the party and the country and expressed confidence the 200 million Soviet people, "in these difficult days," would rally round.

Grief Blankets Moscow

(There was a growing feeling in the West that Stalin already has succumbed and that announcement of his illness was a means of preparing the minds of the Russian people for news of his death.)

Radio stations repeated throughout the day the original bulletin—which said the prime minister and generalissimo was stricken with a brain hemorrhage, or stroke, Sunday night in his apartment behind the 12-foot-thick-walls of the Kremlin. Between readings, the stations broadcast slow and somber instrumental and choral music.

The heads of major Soviet churches—Jewish, Moslem, Buddhist, Baptist and Russian Orthodox—called on their believers to pray for Salin's recovery. The head of the Russian Orthodox church, Patriarch Alexei, held a special service in Yelokovsky Cathedral in Moscow. As a youth, Stalin studied to be a priest in the Russian Orthodox church.

The Soviet capital was blanketed in grief. People huddled in little groups on the streets. As they moved on, there was but one sentence to be heard: "Stalin is ill, Stalin is ill."

Stalin 73 Last Dec. 21

The girl at the Tass office who handed out the news agency's bulletins to foreign correspondents was red-eyed from weeping.

The original bulletin describing Stalin's condition as grave was signed by eight attending physicians.

"Comrade J. V. Stalin had a sudden hemorrhage of the brain which affected vitally important parts of the brain, as a result of which paralysis of the right leg and arm occurred, together with the loss of consciousness and speech," the bulletin said.

Despite treatment, it continued, "considerable disorders in breathing are being observed. The rate of breathing is up to 36 per minute. The rhythm of breathing is incorrect, with periodic lengthy pauses."

Scarred Height Retaken By ROKs

SEOUL, Thursday, March 5 (AP)—Tough South Korean infantrymen—supported by Allied planes and artillery — regained a scarred height on the Korean Central Front Wednesday in a 23-hour battle that left almost half of the Chinese Communist attackers dead or wounded.

The Republic of Korea soldiers gave up the hill position southeast of Kumsong in the early morning before the onslaught of 400 Reds.

They stormed back in late afternoon after fighter - bombers and heavy artilery unleashed a day-long bombardment.

While the fighting raged, Gen. Mark Clark, Allied Far East commander, arrived in Korea from his Tokyo headquarters for his second inspection tour and high level conference since Lt. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor took command of the Eighth Army Feb. 11.

Baltimore Pay Phone "Slugged"; Man Held

BALTIMORE, March 4 (AP)—A 51-year-old man who told police he was a native of Massachusetts. was held for grand jury action today, accused of dropping 13 metal slugs into a telephone coin box for a $3 call to Florida.

Frederick Andrews was arrested at the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad's Camden Station by three detectives who had been stationed there after the telephone company reported a rash of slugs in station pay phones.

Detective Sgt. William Runge said officers found 18 more slugs in Andrews' pockets when they searched him.

Photo Indicates Stalin May Have Been Ill Months

BERLIN, March 4 (AP)—A picture of Joseph Stalin which was smuggled through the Iron Curtain and obtained from an anti-Communist group by The Associated Press in Berlin indicates the Soviet Prime Minister may have been ill for several months.

The picture was taken last summer at a resort on the Crimean peninsula and shows Stalin with snow-white hair, his face marked by deep lines.

It was brought to West Berlin by a Soviet Army officer said to have deserted some time ago and delivered to the anti - Communist group. The name and present whereabouts of the officer are not known here.

"Voice" Official Says Probe Hurts Cold-War Fight

WASHINGTON, March 4 (AP)—A top Voice of America official protested today that the McCarthy committee investigation is damaging the cold-war fight against communism with a public airing of "one-sided" testimony.

The statement came from Reed Harris, deputy administrator of the State Department's International Information Administration, during a day-long wrangle over his order last December to close down the Voice's Hebrew language desk.

Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis), chairman of the Senate investigations subcommittee, came back at Harris with, "You can't defend your position by screaming at this committee."

Word About Files Awaited

The two, who had clashed repeatedly yesterday, argued again today while the subcommittee still waited for word from the State Department about the loyalty files of two employes who figured in earlier testimopy.

McCarthy said he had a pledge of co-operation from R. W. Scott McLeod, the department's new security chief, which may make it unnecessary to try to subpoena the loyalty files of the two employes.

Harris flared up in protest against the subcommittee's methods after what he called attempts to imply that the decision to shut down the Hebrew desk was "part of a pattern to support communism."

Reds "Laugh" At "Voice"

If anyone had that kind of suspicion, he said, it should have been looked into very carefully in closed-door sessions until all the facts were fully developed instead of being spread on the record publicly.

"This can be damaging to our cold-war effort all over the world, and we have evidence it has been," Harris said.

He said he was speaking in the interest of national security, adding, "We don't like to see the Communists laughing at the Voice of America, which they have been doing in the last few days."

McCarthy, after curtly thanking Harris for his "advice," said, "You feel that, by exposing mistakes they can laugh at, we're making a mistake."

Disagreeing, McCarthy said the subcommittee was going ahead with its "exposures."

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., March 4 (AP)—A broken thermostat allowed the water in the First Baptist church baptistry to get up near the boiling point just before a baptism.

"Cooling" Period In Slave Pact Row Is Called By Taft

WASHINGTON, March 4 (AP) — Senate Republican Leader Taft of Ohio today called for a "cooling-off" period in the bitter rift over the wording of a resolution denouncing Soviet Russia's violation of World War II agreements.

Democrats angrily blasted the GOP-revised version of the resolution, originally submitted by President Eisenhower, as challenging the validity of pacts negotiated by the Roosevelt-Truman administration. As the White House proposed the wording it would only denounce Soviet perversion of the agreements to enslave free peoples.

With a wide-open break appearing almost inevitable Taft told newsmen there will be no attempt to get Senate action on the controversial resolution this week.

"We'll try to let everybody cool down," the Ohio senator said.

Then, in a seeming hint that a compromise might yet be reached, Taft added:

"We'll see if anyone has any suggestions."

Van Fleet Has Say

WASHINGTON, March 4 (INS)—Gen. James A. Van Fleet, former commander of United Nations ground forces in Korea, had this to say today about the illness of Soviet Premier Stalin:

"The only good (Communist) is a dead one."

Vishinsky Absent As Red Delegates In U. N. Blast U. S.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., March 4 (AP)—Iron Curtain delegates carried on business as usual in the U. N. today despite their obvious worry and concern over the grave illness of their leader, Premier Stalin.

They slashed at the U. S. and the U. N. on all the old counts and topped it off with a bitter blast at U. S. Chief Delegate Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. over alleged germ warfare.

But the star of the group, Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky, was absent. Rumors flew that he was preparing to hurry back home, but other Russians wouldn't talk and there was no confirmation.

Reporters Quiz Zorin

A mass of reporters and picture people met Soviet Ambassador Valerian A. Zorin as he strode into the U. N. Assembly building this morning. They were waiting for Vishinsky but Zorin, who helped take over Czechoslovakia for Stalin in 1948, was his stand-in. Zorin had no comment. Asked whether he thought the developments might delay U. N. debate he said sharply: "That is a minor question."

Ambassador T. F. Tsiang, Nationalist China's delegate, was one of the few delegates who would talk for publication. He told a luncheon meeting of the U. N. Correspondents Association that he believed the Russian policy would not change regardless of the eventual ruler of that country — and that in fact the "ghost of Stalin might be even more potent than Stalin himself has been."

Would Expel Russians

Tsiang also advocated expelling the Russians from the U. N. and called on the U. N. to forget the 38th Parallel, which was the boundary between South Korea and Communist - dominated North Korea.

In the Political Committee, Stanislaw Skrzesezewski, Polish foreign minister, repeated Vishinsky's tirades against the U. S. and the U. N.

Standley Predicts Russian Revolution

SAN DIEGO, Calif., March 4 (AP)—Adm. William H. Standley, USN ret., American ambassador to Moscow during World War II, today predicted revolution in the Soviet Union when Premier Joseph Stalin dies.

Forecasting a "mad scramble for power" in the USSR after Stalin's death, the retired admiral told an interviewer:

"Once there is a break the people of Russia will fall away from communism and revolt."

He added, "I don't think anything can be worse than it has been as far as the Russian people and we in the Allied world are concerned. Things in the USSR are simply ripe for a change."

Dryer All Right For Clothes But Not So Hot For Figaro

MUSKEGON, Mich., March 4 (AP)—Figaro is a cat who's just had a cat-astrophie.

His 5-year-old master, Jimmy Harryman, fed Figaro his meal. As cats will do, Figaro began to wash up after eating in the usual fashion, with his tongue.

Jimmy thought maybe the mechanical wonders of the age could help his pet.

Down to the basement went Jimmy and Figaro. Shortly, Jimmy returned alone. He told his mother, Mrs. James Harryman, wife of a local physician:

"Guess where Figaro is," and added voluntarily, "he's in the automatic dryer."

Down to the basement went Jimmy and his mother. Out of the machine came Figaro.

The Harrymans figured Figaro was exposed to the tumbling and heat for about 45 minutes, and when he was extricated some of his hair was missing and what was left was scorched. The dryer had to be dismantled to clean out the cat fur.

Jimmy has been instructed to let Figaro dry himself from now on.

Ike Expresses His Sympathy For Russians

President Attends Top-Level Parleys

WASHINGTON, March 4 (AP) — President Eisenhower expressed prayerful sympathy for the people of Russia today in connection with news of the serious illness of Premier Stalin.

Then he went into quick top-level conferences apparently aimed at fitting American policy to developments that could carry the seed of great danger, great good or anything in between.

Meanwhile the belief gained ground among top officials here that the Soviet dictator must be at the point of death — or perhaps even already dead. Their view was that such disturbing news never would have been given out unless Kremlin officials have given up hope of his recovery.

Results Speculated

In Congress the official report that Stalin had suffered a stroke brought out widely varying ideas on the probable results. They ranged from expressions of hope that Stalin's death would set off an internal upheaval that would call a halt to Soviet aggression and might even bring up a leader more amenable to peace, all the way to fears that a top man even more intransigent would emerge and the Reds would try even bolder adventures abroad to keep the people in line at home.

Regardless of the divergence of view, however, the impact of Stalin's disappearance from the world stage after more than 30 years of expanding power, the effect on America's interests and policies, and the prospective chances for war or peace as a result of all these things dominated official concern.

Soviet Policies In Doubt

The one firm fact seemed to be that the illness of the leader of world communism, who already has been built into a legendary figure by his followers and propagandists, cast into doubt the whole future of Russia's behavior and policies in the world.

At one extreme experts thought the rise to power of a younger and possibly more reckless man than the 73-year-old Stalin would greatly increase the chances of World War III. At the other extreme they thought that a new leadership in the Kremlin might prove more agreeable to a settlement of cold war issues, and of the hot war in Korea with the West.

British Officials Talk With President, Dulles

WASHINGTON, March 4 (INS)—British Foreign Secretary Eden and Chancellor of the Exchequer Butler conferred for an hour today with Secretary of State Dulles and then had an unscheduled meeting with President Eisenhower.

The British officials lost no time in beginning their talks on economic problems of the Cold War—disqussions given new significance by the critical illness of Soviet Premier Stalin.

A change in plans carried Eden and Butler to the President's office only a few hours after they arrived in Washington by plane. Originally, they were not scheduled to see Mr. Eisenhower until Friday.

Paris Newspapers Informed Stalin Dead

PARIS, March 4 (AP)—The newspaper Paris-Presse printed a report that the Soviet Embassy in Paris had received word Prime Minister Stalin died at 7 a. m. today. There was no official confirmation.

A reporter who covers the Service de Renseignements (French secret service) said he got the information from a source he considered reliable, but could not identify by name.

His account said that word Stalin had died was sent to the Soviet Embassy here with the advice that the death would be officially announced by Moscow radio.

Van Fleet Says Only Military Victory Can End Korean Fighting

General Urges Longer Draft Term

WASHINGTON, March 4 (AP) — Gen. James A. Van Fleet told Congress today he does not believe the Soviets are interested now in a "shooting war" and said only a military victory can end the fighting in Korea.

The former Eighth Army commander also urged that the draft be extended from 24 to 30 or 36 months "to better prepare our boys to live" through combat, by permitting them more and better training.

With "a little more of what it takes to fight," he said, the United States can gain a military triumph in Korea without necessarily broadening the war.

The field commander made these statements in separate open and closed meetings with the House Armed Services and Foreign Affairs Committees, in a dramatic review of the Korean campaign. He goes before the Senate Armed Services Committee tomorrow.

No A-Bomb Discussion

Chairman Chiperfield (R-Ill) reported Van Fleet told the House Foreign Affairs Committee behind closed doors that "he felt that the Soviets at the present were not interested in engaging in a shooting war."

He said there was no discussion of the use of the atom bomb in Korea.

Chiperfield said in a statement the general expressed belief American forces could "be withdrawn in large numbers from Korea" only after a military victory permitted the Americans to turn over a shorter defense line to the Koreans which they could hold with American support.

This statement evidently meant Van Fleet proposed regaining enough of North Korea to establish a semi-permanent defense line across the narrow neck of the peninsula, from Pyongyang, the North Korean capital, to Wonsan.

War "Must End In Victory"

Chiperfield said Van Fleet "was emphatic in stating that the war in Korea must end in nothing short of victory. Anything short of that would be a defeat. Peace in the Orient would require the unifica-

Revenue Bureau Officials Lashed As Inquiry Ends

WASHINGTON, March 4 (AP)—The Internal Revenue Bureau, shaken by scandals since 1951, was accused by a House Republican leader today of "allowing political considerations to outweigh the public welfare."

Rep. Kean (R-NJ) leveled the criticism at high tax officials as he concluded a two-week investigation of the stormy career of Donald S. Tydings as an alcohol tax official.

Tydings "Untouchable"

Kean said it seems that Tydings was "untouchable" in the revenue bureau because he was a cousin of former Sen. Millard E. Tydings of Maryland.

A House ways and means subcommittee headed by Kean made public records showing that four senators or their aides had intervened at one time or another in behalf of Donald Tydings. The committee also produced a stream of letters from former Sen. Tydings to tax officials soliciting favors for his cousin.

"By the testimony which we have heard in the past week," Kean stated, "the bureau certainly stands condemned for allowing political considerations to outweigh the public welfare."

Damaging Testimony

The probe disclosed that Tydings, a graying little man of 56, was able to rise to an $8,700-a-year job in the alcohol tax unit despite frequent investigations of his official conduct. Witnesses have testified he could "get by with anything."

Their testimony accused him of making financial deals with bootleggers, borrowing money from subordinates and neglecting to repay it for long periods, having an affair with a girl in his Atlanta, Ga., office, and giving contradictory testimony.

State Dept. Will Retire Vincent

WASHINGTON, March 4 (AP) — Secretary of State Dulles today settled the controversial John Carter Vincent loyalty case by permitting the veteran career diplomat to retire.

Dulles rejected a finding by the Civil Service Loyalty Review Board that there was a "reasonable doubt" as to the loyalty of Vincent, minister to Morocco and one-time State Department expert on China policy.

But he decided that Vincent failed to meet the standard which is demanded of a foreign service officer at this time.

For this reason the secretary said he was accepting Vincent's application to retire—at about $8,-100 a year—effective March 31.

"I do not believe that he can usefully continue to serve the United States as a foreign service officer," Dulles said.

The decision was announced by Dulles after concluding a study of the long record and holding two personal conferences with Vincent. After recalling him from his post at Tangier, Morocco, the secretary talked with him privately last Sunday and earlier on Feb. 23. Vincent has returned to Tangier to close out his affairs and return home with his family.

Redden's Opposition Jolts Automatic Md. Tax-Cut Plan

ANNAPOLIS, March 4 (AP) — The automatic tax reduction plan received a jolt today when Sen. Redden (D - Caroline) informed the Senate in no uncertain terms he opposed the measure and urged each senator to "vote his own convictions."

The plan, which in effect would turn surplus state money back to the taxpayers, up to that time had been considered a straight party-line measure, with the 18 Democrats favoring the bill and the 11 Republicans bucking it.

Redden's opposition would not prevent the bill from passing the Senate, but if Gov. McKeldin vetoed the plan it would require 18 votes—two-thirds of the Senate—to pass it over his veto. And with Redden voting "No," and the Republicans holding fast, the governor's veto would stand up.

Redden told the Senate he thought it was "bad in principle to commit future surpluses." any money left over."

Many Believe Red Premier Already Dead

Satellite Bosses Hurry To Moscow

LONDON, Thursday, March 5 (AP)—Moscow radio broadcast a medical bulletin early today which said the condition of Joseph Stalin "remains serious."

The bulletin added that arteriosclerosis has developed.

This is an abnormal hardening of the walls of the arteries. It occurs mostly in old age.

It was the first fresh news to come out of the Kremlin since the original announcement 22 hours ago that Stalin had suffered a stroke.

The 73-year-old master of world communism suffered a brain hemorrhage Sunday night.

He is lying partly paralyzed and speechless.

It was the first time Moscow Radio has carried a report on the condition of Stalin since 3 p. m. Moscow time (7 a. m. EST) Wednesday.

This long delay in issuing medical bulletins had given rise to speculation that the Communist leader already might have died.

The new bulletin said the trouble with the premier's blood circulation had worsened. It said he had continued difficulty in breathing.

Some Western medican men, after studying the Soviet medical bulletin on Stalin, have wondered whether the aging and ruthless Communist leader could have survived this long after his brain hemorrhage Sunday night.

The outside world—and the Russian people—didn't know for 48 hours that Stalin was lying unconscious from his stroke. Many Westerners believed there would be a similar time-lag between Stalin's death and its announcement.

The news that the 73-year-old world Communist chief lay paralyzed and speechless sent waves of speculation through the Western world.

It also sent Red bosses from the satellites scurrying to Moscow for an emergency conference.

Stalin Known Quantity

In Western eyes the Russian dictator, whom the Vatican calls an impersonator of the "anti-Christ," is at least a known quantity. The West has been able to watch him, through holes in what Winston Churchill called the Iron Curtain, for three decades. He is a former ally and to some extent his reactions are known.

But no one in the non-Communist world can say what Stalin's successor—whoever he is—will do. Will a headstrong new Russian leader step up the cold war? Will a struggle in the top echelons for Stalin's mantle touch off a fuse that could explode World War III.

Newspaper editorial writers, the man in the street, men in high position turned these ideas over and over in their minds tonight.

In the Vatican, Pope Pius XII prayed for a better future "for the oppressed Russian people" and

Krupp Industrial Empire Split Up

BONN, Germany, March 4 (AP)—The vast Krupp industrial empire which armed Germany for three wars was broken up today. Alfried Krupp agreed to sell his family's coal, steel and iron holdings and never return to these industries.

Krupp, who served 2½ years as a war criminal, will receive $47,-600,000 for the properties he sells. In return, the Allies will give him sole control of the rest of the family holdings, estimated to be worth 95 million dollars.

The holdings he retains will still leave him one of Europe's greatest manufacturers of steel products. They include plants making everything from pots and pans, through pipes and plumbing, trucks and locomotives to ocean-going tankers.

Once worth nearly a half billion dollars, the sprawling industrial empire was confiscated by the Allies when Krupp, now 44, was convicted by a U. S. war crimes tribunal in 1948 of using slave labor and plundering occupied countries. Sentenced to 12 years, he was freed in 1951 by former U. S. High Commissioner John J. McCloy as an act of mercy.

Down to the basement went Jimmy and his mother. Out of the machine came Figaro.

The Harrymans figured Figaro was exposed to the tumbling and heat for about 45 minutes, and when he was extricated some of his hair was missing and what was left was scorched. The dryer had to be dismantled to clean out the cat fur.

Jimmy has been instructed to let Figaro dry himself from now on.

Vishinsky Absent As Red Delegates In U. N. Blast U. S.

They slashed at the U. S. and the U. N. on all the old counts and topped it off with a bitter blast at U. S. Chief Delegate Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. over alleged germ warfare.

But the star of the group, Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky, was absent. Rumors flew that he was preparing to hurry back home, but other Russians wouldn't talk and there was no confirmation.

Reporters Quiz Zorin

A mass of reporters and picture people met Soviet Ambassador Valerian A. Zorin as he strode into the U. N. Assembly building this morning. They were waiting for Vishinsky but Zorin, who helped take over Czechoslovakia for Stalin in 1948, was his stand-in. Zorin had no comment. Asked whether he thought the developments might delay U. N. debate he said sharply: "That is a minor question."

Ambassador T. F. Tsiang, Nationalist China's delegate, was one of the few delegates who would talk for publication. He told a luncheon meeting of the U. N. Correspondents Association that he believed the Russian policy would not change regardless of the eventual ruler of that country — and that in fact the "ghost of Stalin might be even more potent than Stalin himself has been."

Would Expel Russians

Tsiang also advocated expelling the Russians from the U. N. and called on the U. N. to forget the 38th Parallel, which was the boundary between South Korea and Communist - dominated North Korea.

In the Political Committee, Stanislaw Skrzesezewski, Polish foreign minister, repeated Vishinsky's tirades against the U. S. and the U. N.

Standley Predicts Russian Revolution

SAN DIEGO, Calif., March 4 (AP)—Adm. William H. Standley, USN ret., American ambassador to Moscow during World War II, today predicted revolution in the Soviet Union when Premier Joseph Stalin dies.

Forecasting a "mad scramble for power" in the USSR after Stalin's death, the retired admiral told an interviewer:

"Once there is a break the people of Russia will fall away from communism and revolt."

He added, "I don't think anything can be worse than it has been as far as the Russian people and we in the Allied world are concerned. Things in the USSR are simply ripe for a change."

Ike Expresses His Sympathy For Russians

President Attends Top-Level Parleys

WASHINGTON, March 4 (AP) — President Eisenhower expressed prayerful sympathy for the people of Russia today in connection with news of the serious illness of Premier Stalin.

Then he went into quick top-level conferences apparently aimed at fitting American policy to developments that could carry the seed of great danger, great good or anything in between.

Meanwhile the belief gained ground among top officials here that the Soviet dictator must be at the point of death — or perhaps even already dead. Their view was that such disturbing news never would have been given out unless Kremlin officials have given up hope of his recovery.

Results Speculated

In Congress the official report that Stalin had suffered a stroke brought out widely varying ideas on the probable results. They ranged from expressions of hope that Stalin's death would set off an internal upheaval that would call a halt to Soviet aggression and might even bring up a leader more amenable to peace, all the way to fears that a top man even more intransigent would emerge and the Reds would try even bolder adventures abroad to keep the people in line at home.

Regardless of the divergence of view, however, the impact of Stalin's disappearance from the world stage after more than 30 years of expanding power, the effect on America's interests and policies, and the prospective chances for war or peace as a result of all these things dominated official concern.

Soviet Policies In Doubt

The one firm fact seemed to be that the illness of the leader of world communism, who already has been built into a legendary figure by his followers and propagandists, cast into doubt the whole future of Russia's behavior and policies in the world.

At one extreme experts thought the rise to power of a younger and possibly more reckless man than the 73-year-old Stalin would greatly increase the chances of World War III. At the other extreme they thought that a new leadership in the Kremlin might prove more agreeable to a settlement of cold war issues, and of the hot war in Korea with the West.

British Officials Talk With President, Dulles

WASHINGTON, March 4 (INS)—British Foreign Secretary Eden and Chancellor of the Exchequer Butler conferred for an hour today with Secretary of State Dulles and then had an unscheduled meeting with President Eisenhower.

The British officials lost no time in beginning their talks on economic problems of the Cold War—discussions given new significance by the critical illness of Soviet Premier Stalin.

A change in plans carried Eden and Butler to the President's office only a few hours after they arrived in Washington by plane. Originally, they were not scheduled to see Mr. Eisenhower until Friday.

Paris Newspapers Informed Stalin Dead

PARIS, March 4 (AP)—The newspaper Paris-Presse printed a report that the Soviet Embassy in Paris had received word Prime Minister Stalin died at 7 a. m. today. There was no official confirmation.

A reporter who covers the Service de Renseignements (French secret service) said he got the information from a source he considered reliable, but could not identify by name.

His account said that word Stalin had died was sent to the Soviet Embassy here with the advice that the death would be officially announced by Moscow radio.

Blossom Princess

SHEPHERDSTOWN, W. Va., March 4 (AP)—Miss Carolyn Stokes of Martinsburg, queen of the Shepherd College homecoming here last fall, has been named to represent the college at Washington's Cherry Blossom Festival.

She will be one of the eight princesses from West Virginia colleges.

General Urges Longer Draft Term

WASHINGTON, March 4 (AP) — Gen. James A. Van Fleet told Congress today he does not believe the Soviets are interested now in a "shooting war" and said only a military victory can end the fighting in Korea.

The former Eighth Army commander also urged that the draft be extended from 24 to 30 or 36 months "to better prepare our boys to live" through combat, by permitting them more and better training.

With "a little more of what it takes to fight," he said, the United States can gain a military triumph in Korea without necessarily broadening the war.

The field commander made these statements in separate open and closed meetings with the House Armed Services and Foreign Affairs Committees, in a dramatic review of the Korean campaign. He goes before the Senate Armed Services Committee tomorrow.

No A-Bomb Discussion

Chairman Chiperfield (R-Ill) reported Van Fleet told the House Foreign Affairs Committee behind closed doors that "he felt that the Soviets at the present were not interested in engaging in a shooting war."

He said there was no discussion of the use of the atom bomb in Korea.

Chiperfield said in a statement the general expressed belief American forces could "be withdrawn in large numbers from Korea" only after a military victory permitted the Americans to turn over a shorter defense line to the Koreans which they could hold with American support.

This statement evidently meant Van Fleet proposed regaining enough of North Korea to establish a semi-permanent defense line across the narrow neck of the peninsula, from Pyongyang, the North Korean capital, to Wonsan.

War "Must End In Victory"

Chiperfield said Van Fleet "was emphatic in stating that the war in Korea must end in nothing short of victory. Anything short of that would be a defeat. Peace in the Orient would require the unifica- (Continued on Page 2, Col. 2)

State Dept. Will Retire Vincent

WASHINGTON, March 4 (AP) — Secretary of State Dulles today settled the controversial John Carter Vincent loyalty case by permitting the veteran career diplomat to retire.

Dulles rejected a finding by the Civil Service Loyalty Review Board that there was a "reasonable doubt" as to the loyalty of Vincent, minister to Morocco and one-time State Department expert on China policy.

But he decided that Vincent failed to meet the standard which is demanded of a foreign service officer at this time.

For this reason the secretary said he was accepting Vincent's application to retire—at about $8,100 a year—effective March 31.

"I do not believe that he can usefully continue to serve the United States as a foreign service officer," Dulles said.

The decision was announced by Dulles after concluding a study of the long record and holding two personal conferences with Vincent. After recalling him from his post at Tangier, Morocco, the secretary talked with him privately last Sunday and earlier on Feb. 23. Vincent has returned to Tangier to close out his affairs and return home with his family.

Revenue Bureau Officials Lashed As Inquiry Ends

WASHINGTON, March 4 (AP)—The Internal Revenue Bureau, shaken by scandals since 1951, was accused by a House Republican leader today of "allowing political considerations to outweigh the public welfare."

Rep. Kean (R-NJ) leveled the criticism at high tax officials as he concluded a two-week investigation of the stormy career of Donald S. Tydings as an alcohol tax official.

Tydings "Untouchable"

Kean said it seems that Tydings was "untouchable" in the revenue bureau because he was a cousin of former Sen. Millard E. Tydings of Maryland.

A House ways and means subcommittee headed by Kean made public records showing that four senators or their aides had intervened at one time or another in behalf of Donald Tydings. The committee also produced a stream of letters from former Sen. Tydings to tax officials soliciting favors for his cousin.

"By the testimony which we have heard in the past week," Kean stated, "the bureau certainly stands condemned for allowing political considerations to outweigh the public welfare."

Damaging Testimony

The probe disclosed that Tydings, a graying little man of 56, was able to rise to an $8,700-a-year job in the alcohol tax unit despite frequent investigations of his official conduct. Witnesses have testified he could "get by with anything."

Their testimony accused him of making financial deals with bootleggers, borrowing money from subordinates and neglecting to repay it for long periods, having an affair with a girl in his Atlanta, Ga., office, and giving contradictory testimony.

Redden's Opposition Jolts Automatic Md. Tax-Cut Plan

ANNAPOLIS, March 4 (AP) — The automatic tax reduction plan received a jolt today when Sen. Redden (D - Caroline) informed the Senate in no uncertain terms he opposed the measure and urged each senator to "vote his own convictions."

The plan, which in effect would turn surplus state money back to the taxpayers, up to that time had been considered a straight party-line measure, with the 18 Democrats favoring the bill and the 11 Republicans bucking it.

Redden's opposition would not prevent the bill from passing the Senate, but if Gov. McKeldin voted the plan it would require 18 votes—two-thirds of the Senate—to pass it over his veto. And with Redden voting "No," and the Republicans holding fast, the governor's veto would stand up.

Redden told the Senate he thought it was "bad in principle to commit future surpluses." any money left over."

Many Believe Red Premier Already Dead

Satellite Bosses Hurry To Moscow

LONDON, Thursday, March 5 (AP)—Moscow radio broadcast a medical bulletin early today which said the condition of Joseph Stalin "remains serious."

The bulletin added that arteriosclerosis has developed.

This is an abnormal hardening of the walls of the arteries. It occurs mostly in old age.

It was the first fresh news to come out of the Kremlin since the original announcement 22 hours ago that Stalin had suffered a stroke.

The 73-year-old master of world communism suffered a brain hemorrhage Sunday night.

He is lying partly paralyzed and speechless.

It was the first time Moscow Radio has carried a report on the condition of Stalin since 3 p. m. Moscow time (7 a. m. EST) Wednesday.

This long delay in issuing medical bulletins had given rise to speculation that the Communist leader already might have died.

The new bulletin said the trouble with the premier's blood circulation had worsened. It said he had continued difficulty in breathing.

Some Western medican men, after studying the Soviet medical bulletin on Stalin, have wondered whether the aging and ruthless Communist leader could have survived this long after his brain hemorrhage Sunday night.

The outside world—and the Russian people—didn't know for 48 hours that Stalin was lying unconscious from his stroke. Many Westerners believed there would be a similar time-lag between Stalin's death and its announcement.

The news that the 73-year-old world Communist chief lay paralyzed and speechless sent waves of speculation through the Western world.

It also sent Red bosses from the satellites scurrying to Moscow for an emergency conference.

Stalin Known Quantity

In Western eyes the Russian dictator, whom the Vatican calls an impersonator of the "anti-Christ," is at least a known quantity. The West has been able to watch him, through holes in what Winston Churchill called the Iron Curtain, for three decades. He is a former ally and to some extent his reactions are known.

But no one in the non-Communist world can say what Stalin's successor—whoever he is—will do. Will a headstrong new Russian leader step up the cold war? Will a struggle in the top echelons for Stalin's mantle touch off a fuse that could explode World War III.

Newspaper editorial writers, the man in the street, men in high position turned these ideas over and over in their minds tonight.

Krupp Industrial Empire Split Up

BONN, Germany, March 4 (AP)—The vast Krupp industrial empire which armed Germany for three wars was broken up today. Alfried Krupp agreed to sell his family's coal, steel and iron holdings and never return to these industries.

Krupp, who served 2½ years as a war criminal, will receive $47,600,000 for the properties he sells. In return, the Allies will give him sole control of the rest of the family holdings, estimated to be worth 95 million dollars.

The holdings he retains will still leave him one of Europe's greatest manufacturers of steel products. They include plants making everything from pots and pans, through pipes and plumbing, trucks and locomotives to ocean-going tankers.

Once worth nearly a half billion dollars, the sprawling industrial empire was confiscated by the Allies when Krupp, now 44, was convicted by a U. S. war crimes tribunal in 1948 of using slave labor and plundering occupied countries. Sentenced to 12 years, he was freed in 1951 by former U. S. High Commissioner John J. McCloy as an act of mercy.

KANSAS CITY, March 4 (AP) — Harry S. Truman said today he was sorry to hear of the critical illness of Premier Stalin.

Byrd Presents U. Of Md. Budget

ANNAPOLIS, March 4 (AP) — The University of Maryland's 20-million-dollar budget sailed smoothly in a Finance Committee hearing today on the strength of President H. C. Byrd's presentation, a dozen ceiling-high charts and a six-foot pointer.

The status of the state's Negro colleges prompted the only discussion.

Sen. Sybert (D-Howard) again voiced his opposition to the state's supporting two Negro colleges in separate localities—Morgan State at Baltimore and Maryland State College at Princess Anne, on the lower Eastern Shore.

He cited a recent statement by the State Planning Commission recommending no more permanent construction at Princess Anne until its fate was decided.

The Planning Commission's statement was a misnomer," Byrd declared. "It shouldn't have been made and the commission had no business making it."

Byrd said the university had asked for three million dollars to develop the small college — the state's answer to separate and equal education for Negroes—but the governor wiped it out of the budget.

"The governor is opposed to Princess Anne," Byrd added. "He doesn't want it."

Sen. Phipps (D-Anne Arundel) asked Byrd if the "real opposition to Princess Anne isn't pointed toward doing away with the school so the state will have to admit colored students to College Park?"

Byrd said Phipps' statement was "essentially correct."

"Wouldn't it be cheaper," asked Sybert, "to spend the three million at Morgan and buy a farm for the agricultural students at Princess Anne, instead of spending more money building Princess Anne?"

"You could do that," Byrd answered, "but I don't think it would be any cheaper in the long run."

Redden's

Turnbull said he wanted the Senate to understand he remained wholly behind the automatic reduction plan.

"But I see by the papers the governor is opposed to the principle of the automatic tax reduction bill," he said. "In the event it is vetoed and the veto sustained, I propose to push Senate Bill 305 (his new proposal). But I want the Senate to understand I have not abandoned Senate Bill 104."

The Senate rejected a resolution asking Congress to place a 25 per cent limit on income taxes. But not before Sen. Barton (D-Balto 2nd) orated its virtues.

The bill granting more home rule to municipalities received a setback when several senators began excluding their counties from the bill's provisions.

The bill was sent back to the Judiciary Committee to determine if exclusion of some counties would affect its constitutionality and, if not, to give any other counties a chance to get out from under.

Goldstein introduced a bill to exclude persons living on federal reservations and not permitted to vote in state elections from paying state income taxes.

And Turnbull brought out a proposal which would require the State Roads Commission to get a full court authority before taking over land for road-building.

McKeldin announced he was supporting a bill soon to be introduced raising the salaries of state troopers $200 each. The hike would become effective next July.

This would increase Superintendent Munshower's salary to $8,000 and the beginning trooper's pay to $2,450.

Yugoslavs Seen Pleased

The Yugoslavs—living close under the shadow of Russian guns—seemed pleased. Persons calling Belgrade newspapers and news agencies reportedly expressed "relief and joy" when informed of Stalin's illness. There was cautious hope that Stalin's exit might ease the bitter feud which started five years ago when Yugoslavia was kicked out of the Communist family for refusal to follow Stalin's dictates blindly.

Foreign Office experts and physicians in Western Europe speculated that Stalin already is dead and that announcement of his illness was designed mainly to prepare the minds of the Russian people for the news of his death.

Who Is New Boss?

In a sense, this was a technicality. Someone beside Stalin is running the Soviet Union today and has been since Sunday, when Stalin was stricken. In their own words, the Russians told that Stalin was rendered speechless by the brain hemorrhage, the same kind which killed Franklin D. Roosevelt eight years ago, and that his right arm and leg were paralyzed. Stalin's left hand was withered and useless.

The Moscow radio's announcement said pointedly: "The serious illness of Comrade Stalin will lead to his prolonged absence from government and party leadership."

Who is the new boss?

Maybe it is Georgi M. Malenkov, pudgy, scowling secretary of the Soviet Communist party, and a man who reputedly harbors a deep hatred for the West.

It could be L. P. Beria, bespectacled, scholarly - looking boss of the secret police and of Russia's atomic development project. He is a friend of Malenkov.

"Right-To-Work" Bill Under Fire

ANNAPOLIS, March 4 (AP)—Union spokesmen asserted today a "right-to-work" bill in the General Assembly might outlaw the union shop in Maryland.

At any rate, Paul Wagner of the CIO United Auto Workers said it would tempt employers to "go into some kind of anti-union activity."

A union shop requires workers to join the union after a fixed period on the job. Closed shops, which once compelled membership before a worker could be hired, are illegal.

The measure sponsored by Sen. Redden (D-Caroline) contains a provision in effect legalizing union-shop pacts if negotiated by an organization representing a majority of employes. But it would require a secret vote on such an arrangement.

What aroused the protests were the words "right to work" in the title and preface to the bill.

The union representatives contended this could lead to court interpretation banning union shop agreements.

Dr. Cullen, Noted Gynecologist, Dies

BALTIMORE, March 4 (AP)—Dr. Thomas S. Cullen, internationally known gynecologist and advocate of medical art, died today of a paralytic stroke.

A native of Bridgewater, Ontario, the 84-year-old surgeon came to Baltimore in the middle 1890's when the Johns Hopkins Medical School was just getting started.

Dr. Cullen was associated with the founding members of the faculty of the medical school and later became professor of gynecology, serving until his retirement in 1938.

He was instrumental in establishing the world's first department of medical art at Hopkins in 1910 when he persuaded Max Broedel, who came here from Germany to illustrate a medical text, to stay and head the new school.

Pope Pius Prays For Conversion Of Stalin

VATICAN CITY, March 4 (AP) — The Vatican said today that Pope Pius XII is praying for the conversion of Joseph Stalin and for a better future "for the oppressed Russian people."

A Vatican informant said that when the Pontiff learned of Stalin's grave illness, he retired to his private chapel and offered a special prayer "invoking an extreme act of penitence on the part of Marshal Stalin."

Bill Introduced For Appointment Of Liquor Board

State Senator Robert B. Kimble has introduced a bill in the State Senate that would provide for the appointment of a Board of License Commissioners on June 1.

The liquor board was reconstituted on June 1, 1951, under a bill passed in the General Assembly in the 1951 session.

This 1951 measure provided for the appointment of the Board of License Commissioners, abolishing the Allegany County Liquor Control Board, but it did not provide for the appointment of any future members.

The first term, a two-year one, expires this May and Governor McKeldin has nominated James A. Kenny of Westernport to be the minority party, Democrat, member replacing Oliver H. Bruce.

However, sources here yesterday point out there is technically no stipulation in the 1951 bill covering appointments.

The bill specifically reacts:

"In Allegany County the board shall be reconstituted as of June 1, 1953, as the board of License Commissioners of Allegany County.

"The board as it existed prior thereto shall be abolished as of that date and the tenure of the members of the said board shall be terminated as of that date.

"As of June 1, 1953, the governor shall make recess appointments of three persons to constitute the Board of License Commissioners of Allegany County for terms expiring, respectively, on the first Monday in May, 1955; the first Monday in May, 1957, and the first Monday in May, 1959.

"Thereafter, appointments shall be for terms of six years each.

"Two of the members of said Board of License Commissioners shall always be members of that political party which at the last preceding general election in Allegany County polled the greatest number of votes in the aggregate for the several offices of County Commissioner therein. The third member of said Board of License Commissioners shall always be a member of that political party which at the last preceding General Election in Allegany County polled the second highest number of votes in the aggregate for the several offices of County Commissioner therein."

"The act would take effect June 1."

The present board is comprised of Walter C. Capper, chairman, Stanley Hamilton and Bruce.

Other supervisors attended from Garrett, Washington, Frederick and Carroll counties. Clair Guess, executive secretary of the South Carolina Soil Conservation Committee, was the principal speaker. He addressed two other similar meetings in other sections of Maryland.

The program marking the Centennial year of the religious organization will begin with confirmation services May 17, which will be followed by a series of religious institutes, inter-faith services, sisterhood and youth group services, and will conclude with a banquet to which a number of former members, including descendants of the founders of the congregation will attend. All former rabbis who served the congregation will be invited.

The third and fourth generation of the handful of founders are included in the present membership. The present Temple was purchased in 1866. Washington And Jim Crow

President Eisenhower, who promised in his State of the Union message to "use whatever authority exists in the office of the President to end segregation in the District of Columbia," would be reflecting population trends if he were to name a Negro as one of the three District commissioners. In the 1950 census, the Negro population of the District was 35 per cent of the whole.

Representative Miller (R., Neb.) said on February 24 he had told the administration that a proposed bill to enlarge by two the Board of Commissioners would never pass the House. The bill was the last item on Eisenhower's 11-point legislative program announced on February 9. It was widely predicted then that the President intended to appoint a woman and a Negro to the larger board.

The President's appointive authority offers him his only means to influence segregation policy in the District at present. The Supreme Court is expected in the near future to decide whether it will hear an appeal from a lower court ruling which in effect validated the segregation policy followed by the great majority of District restaurants. The 5-to-4 decision was handed down on Jan. 22.

In "South of Freedom," Carl Rowan, a Negro reporter for the Minneapolis Tribune, points out that Negroes may eat in the Union Station in Washington, in government-building cafeterias, and at the Y.W.C.A. cafeteria, but not in the Y.M.C.A. coffee shop.

The paradox is typical of the general status of racial discrimination in the nation's capital. Negroes serve with whites on the police force though, according to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, they meet discrimination in promotion. But Negro firemen serve in separate companies, Negro officered.

Public schools are segregated, but public libraries and parochial schools not. Swimming pools maintained by the Interior Department and a few municipal swimming pools are not segregated, but most of the municipal pools are. According to the D. C. League of Women Voters: "There is some form of discrimination or segregation in all of the hospitals in the District . . . with the exception of Freedmen's which is all-Negro and maintained by the federal government, and two very small privately-owned institutions for Negroes."

Of the major colleges and universities, only George Washington University has no Negro students. Led by the Quakers, Universalist, Unitarians, and more recently the Catholics, the churches are moving away from segregation.

The NAACP reports considerable recent progress in persuading whites to sell real estate to Negroes, but still cites "pressure" on white owners by the Washington Real Estate Board. Few Negroes live in Washington's suburbs. The three legitimate theaters are non-segregated, but all except the small "art" motion picture houses draw the color line. Negroes are welcome at the baseball park, but as yet neither the Washington Nationals (baseball) nor the Redskins (football) use Negro players.

The Lost Art

It has been said that no other historical act or event was of greater importance to the destinies of the United States than the Louisiana Purchase. This vast domain was bought from France in 1803 for $27,267,622, or four cents an acre.

President Eisenhower has accepted an invitation to go to New Orleans in October to participate in the 150th anniversary of this tremendous acquisition.

From the Louisiana Purchase were carved Louisiana, Missouri, Arkansas, Iowa, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Nebraska and Oklahoma, as well as most of Kansas, Colorado, Montana and Wyoming.

Thus the new republic was given a massive basis for material greatness. The field was open for new experiments in expansion and colonization .The United States won a more dignified, more independent position as between the conflicting purposes of Great Britain and France.

The man who brought all this about was the third President, Thomas Jefferson. His present successor, the 34th President, without doubt had the implications of the Louisiana Purchase in mind when he decided to help celebrate it.

Boldness, imagination, foresight, these were the qualities Jefferson showed in the decision, which outraged some of his earlier fixed ideas, to acquire the Western Mississippi Basin, thus doubling the area of the United States.

There are a score of important lessons to be derived from the Louisiana Purchase. None is of greater present importance than the reminder that the resources of diplomacy, used with skill and courage, can serve the national interest in the highest degree. Diplomacy has been for too long almost a lost art.

Government Is Human

When Mrs. Marge Moretti of Maplewood, N. J., an industrious widow who is supporting two children, baked a cake—forgetting where she had secreted her savings pending acquirement of a new safe deposit box—she burned up $700 in government bonds, $250 in cash and four shares of American Telephone and Telegraph stock.

She has learned that the broiler of a gas range is no place for valuable papers. But she has also learned something about the government.

To many folk the government is remote and impersonal, a vast sweep of massive buildings from which issue incomprehensible laws, draft notices, postage stamps and tax bills. Few ever think of the government as a collection of human beings who are kind and understanding and willing to go to a lot of effort in behalf of an unfortunate citizen. Mrs. Moretti was one of the exceptions, and her confidence was not misplaced.

She hurried to Washington with the charred remains of her tiny fortune. Even before she arrived, her congressmen, Representative Kean, who had read about her misfortune, had started wheels turning.

The Treasury was ready to examine the blackened scraps and identified $297, which was $47 more than Mrs. Moretti thought she had. The bonds were identifiable and will be replaced, along with the currency. And AT&T records confirmed the Moretti holdings, for which a new certificate will be issued.

The happy ending of Mrs. Moretti's heartbreaking experience showed that though the government is big and bound by tortuous strands of red tape, it is approachable and will, when it can, make things right.

How To Keep Well

By Dr. T. R. Van Dellen

The Occurrence Of Coronary Thrombosis

Heart attacks can occur at any time in the usual routine of living. They take place in day time activity or at night when at rest or asleep. This is in contrast to the widespread belief that the attacks usually follow severe physical excertion or an emotional upheaval. These facts have been substantiated many times and were demonstrated in a recent survey in which only 6.5 per cent of the victims were doing something unusual when the heart gave way.

Coronary thrombosis is now the most common type of heart ailment. No wonder the heart association is concerned. It is brought on by hardening of the coronary arteries and ventricles. Many persons are alarmed over the increase in the number of heart attacks. Some blame the medical profession; others accuse our tempo of living. The truth is that the decrease in the death toll from infectious diseases has allowed a greater percentage of men and women to reach the age where heart attacks are prone to occur. In this respect, the higher frequency of heart attacks reflects progress.

In addition, we have made advances in early detection and treatment of coronary thrombosis so that the situation is not as bad as it may appear on the surface. More victims are surviving these attacks and instead of viewing the episodes with alarm, physicians are beginning to regard them as a warning signal to slow down.

Statistics in a recent report by Dr. F. Janney Smith and co-workers of Detroit are typical of our knowledge on this subject. Their patients live in a busy industrial city and many are under the stress of production line working conditions. Of the 920 in this group, 749 were men and the remainder, women. This is a ratio of 4.4 males to 1 female, giving evidence of the vulnerability of the male sex to coronary thrombosis. Women also get a break because they were from three to six years older at the time of the initial attack; the average age for men was 59.6 and for women, 63.4 years. For males, 34 had a coronary before the age of 40, 2 were less than 30, and one was 24 years old. Only two women victims were under 40.

Occlusion of the coronary artery can happen at any time of the year but peaks are noted in November and March. This is particularly true in the north where severe winters place an additional burden on the old ticker. In the past coronary thrombosis was considered a disease principally of executives and professional men. In the Detroit series, only 28.8 per cent were in this group; 34.2 per cent were laborers of whom 18 per cent were unskilled, 16.2 skilled, and 1.2 per cent farmers. This is not an actual index, however, because most patients are from the city.

One-half of the men and women in the survey told of having suffered from angina pectoris a few days to a few weeks prior to a heart attack. High blood pressure was present in 36.8 per cent of the men and 67.2 per cent of the women. Twice as many women as men were obese and the same proportion existed so far as diabetes was concerned. Nevertheless, none of these factors influenced the outcome, which was based on more technical considerations.

FEVER AND ARTHRITIS

J. W. writes: Does constant fever accompany arthritis?

REPLY

No. The majority of arthritics do not have an elevated temperature. The exception is specific infectious arthritis and in rheumatoid arthritis intermittent fever may appear.

OBESITY AND THYROID

E. R. writes: After removal of four-fifths of the thyroid gland because of goiter, is it almost certain that the patient will become fat even though she does not overeat?

REPLY

Obesity occurs occasionally but as a rule enough of the thyroid remains to take care of the body's needs. In addition, thyroid extract can be given to prevent weight gain.

Surgeons, like other artists, have preferences.

In some instances, relief has followed the use of ACTH or contisone within a day or two. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on bursitis.

Congressman Allen Tells Tax-Cutting Congressman There'll Be No Tax Cuts Yet; Baruch's Crusade Against Secrecy Is Badly Needed

WASHINGTON — Congressman Leo Allen of Illinois, Republican, is one of the best-natured members of Congress, but the spunky chairman of the House Rules Committee can slug it out when the occasion requires.

Meeting tax-cutting Congressman Dan Reed of New York the other day, he let his fellow Republican know in no uncertain terms that he was going to continue blocking Reed's tax bill.

When Reed testily demanded that Allen report his bill out of committee for a vote by the full House, Allen replied:

"My committee will be guided by the leadership of the House—Speaker Joe Martin."

"All right," blazed back Reed, "then we'll force my bill out of your committee."

"We'll see about that," Allen retorted, colly. "We'll see about that."

Allen's stand took real courage because Dan Reed is not only chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee but also rules on the membership of all House committees. As such, he can make it tough for those who tangle with him when it comes to parceling out prize posts on important committees.

However, Allen has a few weapons of his own. One is the firm conviction that he was right and that political parties, like individuals, should keep their promises. Two, he has the strong moral support of Speaker Joe Martin; and three, the backing of President Eisenhower, who wants to balance the budget before cutting taxes.

Senate Secrecy

Gaunt, gray Bernie Baruch who has battled against inflation during two world wars, is not battling against Senate secrecy. His scorching telegram to Senator Capehart of Indiana against secret sessions, however, did little good.

"How can the people who fight and die, suffer and pay, pass any judgment if they are left unaware of what and why legislation is passed?" Elder Statesman Baruch wired the committee chairman who's considering price-wage controls.

Immediately following Baruch's telegram, Capehart's committee held another session which was so secret that no minutes were taken and even the committee staff was barred.

Afterwards, with no written record to keep them straight, senators seemed completely confused as to what had happened. Senator Capehart said that Defense Secretary Wilson was "hopeful" of a cut in military costs; but Senator Robertson of Virginia indicated that Wilson said just the opposite.

Senator Maybank of South Carolina said Secretary of Commerce Weeks favored some sort of price-wage freeze power in case of emergency; but Senator Bricker of Ohio said Weeks seemed just the opposite.

However, believing the American people are entitled to know the facts, this column can report the accurate highlights of what happened at this secret session:

Inside The Committee

1. Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey stated flatly that the actual cost of operating the government cannot be cut this year. Cuts might be made in some non-operating categories, Humphrey said . . . He's been looking over the veterans budget for possible cuts . . . Heaviest cuts would have to be made in foreign aid and defense.

2. Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson disagreed about cutting the defense budget, didn't see how any big cuts could be made this year, said he hoped to reduce the defense budget by five billions in the fiscal year 1955 . . . Instead of cutting the budget now, Wilson said, he'd actually stepped up spending on several items, such as airplane engines.

"Do you think the government can be run like big business?" asked Senator Irving Ives of New York.

"No," replied the man who once said what's good for General Motors is good for the United States, "there are too many sacred cows."

3. Secretary of Commerce Weeks emphasized that government should get out of all business, such as synthetic rubber and smelting tin.

All three cabinet officers agreed they didn't want to keep stand-by machinery for controlling price-wages, did want stand-by authority for a straight, 60-day freeze in case of emergency. This would give Congress time to enact new controls legislation.

Not a word was spoken during this highly secret hearing that affected the national security. Yet senators even barred clerks and stenographers.

Shrimps vs. Oil

Texas and Florida congressmen aren't happy about having it publicized, but the tidelands oil law is going to boomerang against the shrimp industry of their states. It's going to make it almost impossible for Texas, Louisiana and Florida shrimp boats to fish off the Mexican coast.

What's happened is that Mexico hitherto has claimed that she controlled Gulf of Mexico waters nine miles out to sea and would not let Florida, Texas and Louisiana shrimp boats fish inside. The United States, however, refused to recognize Mexico's nine-mile limit, insisted the limit was three miles.

But now Texas, Florida and GAL TWO—merry go round . . . Louisiana congressmen propose extending the limit 10½ miles for Texas and Florida. This automatically strengthens Mexico's hand and removes any argument about seizing shrimp boats inside the nine-mile limit. Mexico can now maintain that her nine-mile limit is less than the new tidelands limit.

NOTE—There are about 300 American shrimpers operating in what Mexico claims to be her waters. Four Texas shrimp boats were seized and their crews arrested only last week.

Capitol News Capsules

Military Padding—Senator Long of Louisiana has accused the Pentagon of padding its public works budget — as insurance against Congressional cuts. Long charged behind closed doors that the Defense Department has been trying to outfox Congress by asking more money than it needs for public works so the military will still have plenty of money in case Congress cuts. The policy, Long claims, has been dictated by the White House.

Navy vs. Air Force—TheNavy is preparing to reopen its feud with the Air Force over long-range bombers. This time the Navy won't attack the B-36, but will concentrate on the Air Force's long-range jet bomber, the B-47. Already the Navy has planted stories with reporters that the B-47 can't drop the atomic bomb. To disprove this, the Air Force will deliberately use a B-47 to drop an atomic bomb during the Nevada tests this month.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The Wife Of Monte Cristo

I sat myself down to watch the McCarthy Committee hearings on the attempted abolition of the Hebrew desk of the Voice of America. I wanted to see it on television which NBC was showing nationally over its network at 2 p. m. on Saturday afternoon. I could have gone to the hearings, but I wanted to see it as the people over the country were getting the story.

Instead I got an ancient vintage film, "The Wife of Monte Cristo," an enterprise unworthy of my time or anyone else's. Apparently an hour of an important historic session, involving national policy, was taken off TV because it was someone's idea that this old piece of celluloid needed to be produced on television to accompany a male demonstrating how to embroidery. Then they showed a travelogue, "Winter in New York State," to fill in the time.

And while this was going on, television in other parts of the country was showing Dr. Sidney Glazer, a scholar in many tongues and an authority on pro - American propaganda, telling how just at the moment when it would do Stalin the most harm and the United States the most good, the Hebrew desk was ordered abolished to save something like $15,000. And this economy was in an agency that had thrown $31,000,000 down a rathole.

When will television grow up?

I telephoned to the local station and the answerer was wearied by protests. Even before the question was asked, he shouted "3 p. m."—meaning that if I waited through an hour of this drivel and embroidery, I might see something important. Many do not wait; they know that it will be in the newspapers.

Television has descended to such stupidity in its daytime programs that even my children have turned from it. There are the same horsemen riding through the same country shooting each other and catching the same villains until they can tell in advance all that is going to happen. With the realism of the young, they announce that it stinks, which I am sure is descriptive.

On this particular afternoon, I knew that the hearing was to be of the utmost importance. Just at the moment that Stalin started his attacks on the Jews, the Voice of America decided to abolish its Hebrew desk. In other words, the Voice was taking its instructions as though directly from Stalin. I knew that the witnesses were not disgruntled or dismissed employes, but that they had been instructed by the State Department to testify.

The public did no know those details, but the word had got out, in the city with the largest Jewish population in the world, New York, that the hearing would be interesting. It was timed for 2 p. m. The listening audience could have been enormous.

But not on television in New York. The NBC-TV would show "The Wife of Monte Cristo," a dull, vapid, meaningless mass of time-consuming emptiness that neither informed, amused or elevated.

I do not often watch daytime television, not even when I am stuck in a hotel room because usually when I turn it on, I find nothing of interest. Long ago, I had forbidden my children to watch the wrestling matches during which fat, dull-witted men play at gouging out each other's eyes, in an exhibition of absence of sportsmanship. If adults can play that way, why should children pay any attention to what is fair and decent in sports? Hair-pulling seems to be the sign of brilliance among these "sports."

No prude, I nevertheless feel that all the recent fuss about a woman giving birth to a baby on television struck me as vulgar and unfit for children. Some line ought to be drawn somewhere. I wondered whether television was not going to make a hero of Jelke and provide commercial sponsorship for the oldest profession in the world—called that by those who do not know that the oldest profession is husbandry, agriculture, the work of man in building a home and providing for his family. The Jelke exhibition did not occur, probably to the disappointment of the exhibitionists who marred justice in that trial.

Television can do much for this country, but it cannot do it by lacking imagination and a sense of fitness.

Matter Of Fact

WASHINGTON.

Maybe it is just as well that the perpetual crisis in Iran entered one of its incandescent stages at this time. This week Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden can talk the problem over face to face, directly, frankly and without the obstacles created by cable communications. Under the whiplash of necessity, they may even agree, at long last, on a positive, common policy in the Middle East.

The need is certainly dire. The drama at Tehran is only one part of a broad and terrifying pattern, in which the other parts are also close to incandescence.

In recent weeks, the American ambassadors throughout the Middle East, and especially in the Arab countries, have begun to take a tone of downright despair in their messages to the State Department. The Arab-Israeli dispute has dragged on too long. Anti-American feeling has grown more and more inflamed. The new anti-Semitism of the Kremlin has greatly increased the inflamation.

There are grave immediate dangers. For instance, if the Kremlin chooses to send arms to Col. Shishekly, the dictator of Syria, the sequel may easily be another outbreak of large-scale fighting between Arabs and Israelis. (The border war goes on interminably like a low fever.) Or the Soviets can arm the Iraqi dissidents. Or there can be some other sort of irreparable breakdown or governmental crisis. This would happen even in Egypt, which is the only place where the trend of events is at all hopeful.

Government May Fall

In this somber picture, Iran has a double importance. One of the causes of the troubles that overtook the aging Premier Mossadegh over the weekend, is a division of power over the army and police. The Shah of Iran formerly controlled both police and army. Mossadegh has been seeking to wrest this control from him. The process is only half completed. With the forces of law and order thus distracted and divided, there is an obvious opportunity for the Communist Tudeh party. The government of Iran is now such a ramshackled structure that it may fall apart at any time.

Premier Mossadegh actually invited trouble, by beginning to behave like a dictator before he had consolidated his power. Behind the new riots are the riots that blew up some time ago, out of the rivalry between Mossadegh and his former ally, the Mullah Kashani. The aged Kashani, who leads the Tehran street mobs and runs the Fedayan Islam, a "Murder Inc." sought to prevent Mossadegh from being granted full powers by the Iranian Parliament. Kashani's challenge failed. Mossadegh threatened to send the Mullah abroad "to study theology." The religious potentate subsided for the time being.

Then Mossadegh moved in on the shah. The extraordinary ultimatum which was presented to the shah has not been fully reported. Mossadegh accused his monarch of consorting with his enemies. He demanded that the shah see no one, foreign or Iranian, officer or civilian, without governmental permission. He asked the shah to hand over the crown lands. He requested complete control of the armed forces. And he insisted on a detailed accounting of palace expenditures.

Almost Settled Oil Rows

No wonder, then, that the shah declared he would leave his country, rather than submit. Unfortunately for Mossadegh, the shah is genuinely popular; while Mossadegh himself has been lately losing ground, especially among the powerful merchant class, whose business is not helped by Iran's present condition of endemic bankruptcy. Kashani raised his head again, and got out the street mobs on the shah's behalf. So the trouble began. Where it may end, it would be ridiculous to try to predict at this distance.

But the danger of final collapse of the crazy Iranian governmental structure, is only one-half of the importance of Iran. The other half is symbolized by the more hopeful fact, that only last month the long efforts of Assistant Secretary of State Henry Byrode, at this end, and of our ambassador, Loy Henderson, in Tehran, were all but crowned with triumph. They would have settled the bitter oil dispute between the British and Iranians if a silly row had not started about the Iranian translation of the word "enterprise."

If order is restored in Tehran, and a settlement of the oil dispute can then be arranged, the first steps will have been taken toward the pacification of Iran. The pacification of Iran is one of the three essential first steps, in turn, towards the pacification of the Middle East. The others are settlement of the Suez dispute with Egypt, and, most important of all, final settlement of the endless conflict between the Arabs and Israelis.

If these steps cannot be taken soon—and Secretary Dulles has no uglier or more difficult assignment—the Middle East is quite likely to burst into flames, affecting the whole world.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON—General Omar Bradley seems to have made the wrong speech at the wrong time and in the wrong place.

As chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, it will be presumed that he has just spoken for the top military staff of the government. But that isn't true.

As the top-ranking military chief, it will be presumed that he wouldn't make a speech outlining what can or cannot be done in Korea without first getting approval for his address from the civilian side of the administration. But this isn't true, either.

The general, in his opening sentence of a long, prepared speech issued formally by the Department of Defense here, states frankly that what he has to say "on Korea is only my personal viewpoint and from a strictly military viewpoint." Then he proceeds to outline to a "round table" at the swanky and exclusive Everglades Club at Palm Beach, Florida—a strange place to make an important military pronouncement—the four courses of action that can be taken by the United States.

Although General Bradley insists at the end of his speech that, "as a member of the Joint Chief of Staff," he is "recommending neither for nor against any of these actions," he nevertheless evaluated one of the four courses and showed his plain opposition to it.

Contrary To New Approach

This is a curious business. The Russian Communist high command and the Politburo are doubtless anxious to know, as guidance to their "cold war" moves, just how far they can go in harassing the free nations of the world, particularly the United States. It seems strange that the man who holds the title of chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff would, without consulting his colleagues on the Joint Chiefs or the secretary of State, proceed to give his personal attitude toward policies that can only be laid down by the President and the secretary of State after consultation with the National Security Council.

Any idea that the Bradley speech was deliberately "planted" by the administration can be dispelled because one of the cardinal points in the new psychological warfare approach is not to tell Soviet Russia exactly what America intends to do.

It seems odd that the speech was delivered on the eve of the arrival in Washington of General Van Fleet, who says bluntly that he thinks a United Nations offensive could push the Communists in Korea to the Yalu River. General Bradley made a speech, too, on the eve of General MacArthur's first appearance before Congress, which was believed to have been designed to anticipate and contradict the MacArthur viewpoint ahead of time.

What seems strange, too, is that a man who speaks "from a strictly military viewpoint," as General Bradley claims he is doing, doesn't say what American military power can really do in Korea. Also, he discusses various points in world policy and diplomatic commitments in Europe which are certainly not in his province. In describing, for instance, what he calls the "fourth course of action," he says:

"It involves taking any one, or any combination, of military steps open to us in order to get a decision in Korea even while we realize that it might eventually involve us in an all-out war with Communist China. We must realize that broadening the war in this way might pin down the bulk of our military power from the continent of Asia, and could eventually develop into World War III.

"We would have to assess the risk with each step taken. We would have to be prepared for countermeasures the Communists could take and the countermeasures that eventually the Soviet Union might take because of the Sino-Russian Treaty.

"Preliminary to this course of action, it would seem to me that

Washington And Jim Crow

President Eisenhower, who promised in his State of the Union message to "use whatever authority exists in the office of the President to end segregation in the District of Columbia," would be reflecting population trends if he were to name a Negro as one of the three District commissioners. In the 1950 census, the Negro population of the District was 35 per cent of the whole.

Representative Miller (R., Neb.) said on February 24 he had told the administration that a proposed bill to enlarge by two the Board of Commissioners would never pass the House. The bill was the last item on Eisenhower's 11-point legislative program announced on February 9. It was widely predicted then that the President intended to appoint a woman and a Negro to the larger board.

The President's appointive authority offers him his only means to influence segregation policy in the District at present. The Supreme Court is expected in the near future to decide whether it will hear an appeal from a lower court ruling which in effect validated the segregation policy followed by the great majority of District restaurants. The 5-to-4 decision was handed down on Jan. 22.

In "South of Freedom," Carl Rowan, a Negro reporter for the Minneapolis Tribune, points out that Negroes may eat in the Union Station in Washington, in government-building cafeterias, and at the Y.W.C.A. cafeteria, but not in the Y.M.C.A. coffee shop.

The paradox is typical of the general status of racial discrimination in the nation's capital. Negroes serve with whites on the police force though, according to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, they meet discrimination in promotion. But Negro firemen serve in separate companies, Negro officered.

Public schools are segregated, but public libraries and parochial schools not. Swimming pools maintained by the Interior Department and a few municipal swimming pools are not segregated, but most of the municipal pools are. According to the D. C. League of Women Voters: "There is some form of discrimination or segregation in all of the hospitals in the District . . . with the exception of Freedmen's which is all-Negro and maintained by the federal government, and two very small privately-owned institutions for Negroes."

Of the major colleges and universities, only George Washington University has no Negro students. Led by the Quakers, Universalist, Unitarians, and more recently the Catholics, the churches are moving away from segregation.

The NAACP reports considerable recent progress in persuading whites to sell real estate to Negroes, but still cites "pressure" on white owners by the Washington Real Estate Board. Few Negroes live in Washington's suburbs. The three legitimate theaters are non-segregated, but all except the small "art" motion picture houses draw the color line. Negroes are welcome at the baseball park, but as yet neither the Washington Nationals (baseball) nor the Redskins (football) use Negro players.

The Lost Art

It has been said that no other historical act or event was of greater importance to the destinies of the United States than the Louisiana Purchase. This vast domain was bought from France in 1803 for $27,267,622, or four cents an acre.

President Eisenhower has accepted an invitation to go to New Orleans in October to participate in the 150th anniversary of this tremendous acquisition.

From the Louisiana Purchase were carved Louisiana, Missouri, Arkansas, Iowa, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Nebraska and Oklahoma, as well as most of Kansas, Colorado, Montana and Wyoming.

Thus the new republic was given a massive basis for material greatness. The field was open for new experiments in expansion and colonization .The United States won a more dignified, more independent position as between the conflicting purposes of Great Britain and France.

The man who brought all this about was the third President, Thomas Jefferson. His present successor, the 34th President, without doubt had the implications of the Louisiana Purchase in mind when he decided to help celebrate it.

Boldness, imagination, foresight, these were the qualities Jefferson showed in the decision, which outraged some of his earlier fixed ideas, to acquire the Western Mississippi Basin, thus doubling the area of the United States.

There are a score of important lessons to be derived from the Louisiana Purchase. None is of greater present importance than the reminder that the resources of diplomacy, used with skill and courage, can serve the national interest in the highest degree. Diplomacy has been for too long almost a lost art.

This is not an actual index, however, because most patients are from the city.

One-half of the men and women in the survey told of having suffered from angina pectoris a few days to a few weeks prior to a heart attack. High blood pressure was present in 36.8 per cent of the men and 67.2 per cent of the women. Twice as many women as men were obese and the same proportion existed so far as diabetes was concerned. Nevertheless, none of these factors influenced the outcome, which was based on more technical considerations.

FEVER AND ARTHRITIS

J. W. writes: Does constant fever accompany arthritis?

REPLY

No. The majority of arthritics do not have an elevated temperature. The exception is specific infectious arthritis and in rheumatoid arthritis intermittent fever may appear.

OBESITY AND THYROID

E. R. writes: After removal of four-fifths of the thyroid gland because of goiter, is it almost certain that the patient will become fat even though she does not overeat?

REPLY

Obesity occurs occasionally but as a rule enough of the thyroid remains to take care of the body's needs. In addition, thyroid extract can be given to prevent weight gain.

CLAMPS AND STITCHES

J. Y. writes: Why do some surgeons use clamps after abdominal surgery and other use stitches?

REPLY

Surgeons, like other artists, have preferences.

SHOULDER BURSITIS

L. S. writes: How long does it take for an arm to return to normal after an attack of bursitis of the shoulder?

In some instances, relief has followed the use of ACTH or contisone within a day or two. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on bursitis.

Congressman Allen Tells Tax-Cutting Congressman There'll Be No Tax Cuts Yet; Baruch's Crusade Against Secrecy Is Badly Needed

WASHINGTON — Congressman Leo Allen of Illinois, Republican, is one of the best-natured members of Congress, but the spunky chairman of the House Rules Committee can slug it out when the occasion requires.

Meeting tax-cutting Congressman Dan Reed of New York the other day, he let his fellow Republican know in no uncertain terms that he was going to continue blocking Reed's tax bill.

When Reed testily demanded that Allen report his bill out of committee for a vote by the full House, Allen replied:

"My committee will be guided by the leadership of the House—Speaker Joe Martin."

"All right," blazed back Reed, "then we'll force my bill out of your committee."

"We'll see about that," Allen retorted, colly. "We'll see about that."

Allen's stand took real courage because Dan Reed is not only chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee but also rules on the membership of all House committees. As such, he can make it tough for those who tangle with him when it comes to parceling out prize posts on important committees.

However, Allen has a few weapons of his own. One is the firm conviction that he was right and that political parties, like individuals, should keep their promises. Two, he has the strong moral support of Speaker Joe Martin; and three, the backing of President Eisenhower, who wants to balance the budget before cutting taxes.

Senate Secrecy

Gaunt, gray Bernie Baruch who has battled against inflation during two world wars, is not battling against Senate secrecy. His scorching telegram to Senator Capehart of Indiana against secret sessions, however, did little good.

"How can the people who fight and die, suffer and pay, pass any judgment if they are left unaware of what and why legislation is passed?" Elder Statesman Baruch wired the committee chairman who's considering price-wage controls.

Immediately following Baruch's telegram, Capehart's committee held another session which was so secret that no minutes were taken and even the committee staff was barred.

Afterwards, with no written record to keep them straight, senators seemed completely confused as to what had happened. Senator Capehart said that Defense Secretary Wilson was "hopeful" of a cut in military costs; but Senator Robertson of Virginia indicated that Wilson said just the opposite.

Senator Maybank of South Carolina said Secretary of Commerce Weeks favored some sort of price-wage freeze power in case of emergency; but Senator Bricker of Ohio said Weeks seemed just the opposite.

However, believing the American people are entitled to know the facts, this column can report the accurate highlights of what happened at this secret session:

Inside The Committee

1. Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey stated flatly that the actual cost of operating the government cannot be cut this year. Cuts might be made in some non-operating categories, Humphrey said . . . He's been looking over the veterans budget for possible cuts . . . Heaviest cuts would have to be made in foreign aid and defense.

2. Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson disagreed about cutting the defense budget, didn't see how any big cuts could be made this year, said he hoped to reduce the defense budget by five billions in the fiscal year 1955 . . . Instead of cutting the budget now, Wilson said, he'd actually stepped up spending on several items, such as airplane engines.

"Do you think the government can be run like big business?" asked Senator Irving Ives of New York.

"No," replied the man who once said what's good for General Motors is good for the United States, "there are too many sacred cows."

3. Secretary of Commerce Weeks emphasized that government should get out of all business, such as synthetic rubber and smelting tin.

All three cabinet officers agreed they didn't want to keep stand-by machinery for controlling price-wages, did want stand-by authority for a straight 60-day freeze in case of emergency. This would give Congress time to enact new controls legislation.

Not a word was spoken during this highly secret hearing that affected the national security. Yet senators even barred clerks and stenographers.

Shrimps vs. Oil

Texas and Florida congressmen aren't happy about having it publicized, but the tidelands oil law is going to boomerang against the shrimp industry of their states. It's going to make it almost impossible for Texas, Louisiana and Florida shrimp boats to fish off the Mexican coast.

What's happened is that Mexico hitherto has claimed that she controlled Gulf of Mexico waters nine miles out to sea and would not let Florida, Texas and Louisiana shrimp boats fish inside. The United States, however, refused to recognize Mexico's nine-mile limit, insisted the limit was three miles.

But now Texas, Florida and GAL TWO—merry go round . . . Louisiana congressmen propose extending the limit 10½ miles for Texas and Florida. This automatically strengthens Mexico's hand and removes any argument about seizing shrimp boats inside the nine-mile limit. Mexico can now maintain that her nine-mile limit is less than the new tidelands limit.

NOTE—There are about 300 American shrimpers operating in what Mexico claims to be her waters. Four Texas shrimp boats were seized and their crews arrested only last week.

Capitol News Capsules

Military Padding—Senator Long of Louisiana has accused the Pentagon of padding its public works budget — as insurance against Congressional cuts. Long charged behind closed doors that the Defense Department has been trying to outfox Congress by asking more money than it needs for public works so the military will still have plenty of money in case Congress cuts. The policy, Long claims, has been dictated by the White House.

Navy vs. Air Force—TheNavy is preparing to reopen its feud with the Air Force over long-range bombers. This time the Navy won't attack the B-36, but will concentrate on the Air Force's long-range jet bomber, the B-47. Already the Navy has planted stories with reporters that the B-47 can't drop the atomic bomb. To disprove this, the Air Force will deliberately use a B-47 to drop an atomic bomb during the Nevada tests this month.

These Days

The Wife Of Monte Cristo

I sat myself down to watch the McCarthy Committee hearings on the attempted abolition of the Hebrew desk of the Voice of America. I wanted to see it on television which NBC was showing nationally over its network at 2 p. m. on Saturday afternoon. I could have gone to the hearings, but I wanted to see it as the people over the country were getting the story.

Instead I got an ancient vintage film, "The Wife of Monte Cristo," an enterprise unworthy of my time or anyone else's. Apparently an hour of an important historic session, involving national policy, was taken off TV because it was someone's idea that this old piece of celluloid needed to be produced on television to accompany a male demonstrating how to embroidery. Then they showed a travelogue, "Winter in New York State," to fill in the time.

And while this was going on, television in other parts of the country was showing Dr. Sidney Glazer, a scholar in many tongues and an authority on pro-American propaganda, telling how just at the moment when it would do Stalin the most harm and the United States the most good, the Hebrew desk was ordered abolished to save something like $15,000. And this economy was in an agency that had thrown $31,000,000 down a rathole.

When will television grow up?

I telephoned to the local station and the answerer was wearied by protests. Even before the question was asked, he shouted "3 p. m."—meaning that if I waited through an hour of this drivel and embroidery, I might see something important. Many do not wait; they know that it will be in the newspapers.

Television has descended to such stupidity in its daytime programs that even my children have turned from it. There are the same horsemen riding through the same country shooting each other and catching the same villains until they can tell in advance all that is going to happen. With the realism of the young, they announce that it stinks, which I am sure is descriptive.

On this particular afternoon, I knew that the hearing was to be of the utmost importance. Just at the moment that Stalin started his attacks on the Jews, the Voice of America decided to abolish its Hebrew desk. In other words, the Voice was taking its instructions as though directly from Stalin. I knew that the witnesses were not disgruntled or dismissed employes, but that they had been instructed by the State Department to testify.

The public did no know those details, but the word had got out, in the city with the largest Jewish population in the world, New York, that the hearing would be interesting. It was timed for 2 p. m. The listening audience could have been enormous.

But not on television in New York. The NBC-TV would show "The Wife of Monte Cristo," a dull, vapid, meaningless mass of time-consuming emptiness that neither informed, amused or elevated.

I do not often watch daytime television, not even when I am stuck in a hotel room because usually when I turn it on, I find nothing of interest. Long ago, I had forbidden my children to watch the wrestling matches during which fat, dull-witted men play at gouging out each other's eyes, in an exhibition of absence of sportsmanship. If adults can play that way, why should children pay any attention to what is fair and decent in sports? Hair-pulling seems to be the sign of brilliance among these "sports."

No prude, I nevertheless feel that all the recent fuss about a woman giving birth to a baby on television struck me as vulgar and unfit for children. Some line ought to be drawn somewhere. I wondered whether television was not going to make a hero of Jelke and provide commercial sponsorship for the oldest profession in the world—called that by those who do not know that the oldest profession is husbandry, agriculture, the work of man in building a home and providing for his family. The Jelke exhibition did not occur, probably to the disappointment of the exhibitionists who marred justice in that trial.

Television can do much for this country, but it cannot do it by lacking imagination and a sense of fitness.

Matter Of Fact

WASHINGTON.

Maybe it is just as well that the perpetual crisis in Iran entered one of its incandescent stages at this time. This week Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden can talk the problem over face to face, directly, frankly and without the obstacles created by cable communications. Under the whiplash of necessity, they may even agree, at long last, on a positive, common policy in the Middle East.

The need is certainly dire. The drama at Tehran is only one part of a broad and terrifying pattern, in which the other parts are also close to incandescence.

In recent weeks, the American ambassadors throughout the Middle East, and especially in the Arab countries, have begun to take a tone of downright despair in their messages to the State Department. The Arab-Israeli dispute has dragged on too long. Anti-American feeling has grown more and more inflamed. The new anti-Semitism of the Kremlin has greatly increased the inflamation.

There are grave immediate dangers. For instance, if the Kremlin chooses to send arms to Col. Shishekly, the dictator of Syria, the sequel may easily be another outbreak of large-scale fighting between Arabs and Israelis. (The border war goes on interminably like a low fever.) Or the Soviets can arm the Iraqi dissidents. Or there can be some other sort of irreparable breakdown or governmental crisis. This would happen even in Egypt, which is the only place where the trend of events is at all hopeful.

Government May Fall

In this somber picture, Iran has a double importance. One of the causes of the troubles that overtook the aging Premier Mossadegh over the weekend, is a division of power over the army and police. The Shah of Iran formerly controlled both police and army. Mossadegh has been seeking to wrest this control from him. The process is only half completed. With the forces of law and order thus distracted and divided, there is an obvious opportunity for the Communist Tudeh party. The government of Iran is now such a ramshackled structure that it may fall apart at any time.

Premier Mossadegh actually invited trouble, by beginning to behave like a dictator before he had consolidated his power. Behind the new riots are the riots that blew up some time ago, out of the rivalry between Mossadegh and his former ally, the Mullah Kashani. The aged Kashani, who leads the Tehran street mobs and runs the Fedayan Islam, a "Murder Inc." sought to prevent Mossadegh from being granted full powers by the Iranian Parliament. Kashani's challenge failed. Mossadegh threatened to send the Mullah abroad "to study theology." The religious potentate subsided for the time being.

Then Mossadegh moved in on the shah. The extraordinary ultimatum which was presented to the shah has not been fully reported. Mossadegh accused his monarch of consorting with his enemies. He demanded that the shah see no one, foreign or Iranian, officer or civilian, without governmental permission. He asked the shah to hand over the crown lands. He requested complete control of the armed forces. And he insisted on a detailed accounting of palace expenditures.

Almost Settled Oil Rows

No wonder, then, that the shah declared he would leave his country, rather than submit. Unfortunately for Mossadegh, the shah is genuinely popular; while Mossadegh himself has been lately losing ground, especially among the powerful merchant class, whose business is not helped by Iran's present condition of endemic bankruptcy. Kashani raised his head again, and got out the street mobs on the shah's behalf. So the trouble began. Where it may end, it would be ridiculous to try to predict at this distance.

But the danger of final collapse of the crazy Iranian governmental structure, is only one-half of the importance of Iran. The other half is symbolized by the more hopeful fact, that only last month the long efforts of Assistant Secretary of State Henry Byrode, at this end, and of our ambassador, Loy Henderson, in Tehran, were all but crowned with triumph. They would have settled the bitter oil dispute between the British and Iranians if a silly row had not started about the Iranian translation of the word "enterprise."

If order is restored in Tehran, and a settlement of the oil dispute can then be arranged, the first steps will have been taken toward the pacification of Iran. The pacification of Iran is one of the three essential first steps, in turn, towards the pacification of the Middle East. The others are settlement of the Suez dispute with Egypt, and, most important of all, final settlement of the endless conflict between the Arabs and Israelis.

If these steps cannot be taken soon—and Secretary Dulles has no uglier or more difficult assignment—the Middle East is quite likely to burst into flames, affecting the whole world.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON—General Omar Bradley seems to have made the wrong speech at the wrong time and in the wrong place.

As chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, it will be presumed that he has just spoken for the top military staff of the government. But that isn't true.

As the top-ranking military chief, it will be presumed that he wouldn't make a speech outlining what can or cannot be done in Korea without first getting approval for his address from the civilian side of the administration. But this isn't true, either.

The general, in his opening sentence of a long, prepared speech issued formally by the Department of Defense here, states frankly that what he has to say "on Korea is only my personal viewpoint and from a strictly military viewpoint." Then he proceeds to outline to a "round table" at the swanky and exclusive Everglades Club at Palm Beach, Florida—a strange place to make an important military pronouncement—the four courses of action that can be taken by the United States.

Although General Bradley insists at the end of his speech that, "as a member of the Joint Chief of Staff," he is "recommending neither for nor against any of these actions," he nevertheless evaluated one of the four courses and showed his plain opposition to it.

Contrary To New Approach

This is a curious business. The Russian Communist high command and the Politburo are doubtless anxious to know, as guidance to their "cold war" moves, just how far they can go in harassing the free nations of the world, particularly the United States. It seems strange that the man who holds the title of chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff would, without consulting his colleagues on the Joint Chiefs or the secretary of State, proceed to give his personal attitude toward policies that can only be laid down by the President and the secretary of State after consultation with the National Security Council.

Any idea that the Bradley speech was deliberately "planted" by the administration can be dispelled because one of the cardinal points in the new psychological warfare approach is not to tell Soviet Russia exactly what America intends to do.

It seems odd that the speech was delivered on the eve of the arrival in Washington of General Van Fleet, who says bluntly that he thinks a United Nations offensive could push the Communists in Korea to the Yalu River. General Bradley made a speech, too, on the eve of General MacArthur's first appearance before Congress, which was believed to have been designed to anticipate and contradict the MacArthur viewpoint ahead of time.

What seems strange, too, is that a man who speaks "from a strictly military viewpoint," as General Bradley claims he is doing, doesn't say what American military power can really do in Korea. Also, he discusses various points in world policy and diplomatic commitments in Europe which are certainly not in his province. In describing, for instance, what he calls the "fourth course of action," he says:

"It involves taking any one, or any combination, of military steps open to us in order to get a decision in Korea even while we realize that it might eventually involve us in an all-out war with Communist China. We must realize that broadening the war in this way might pin down the bulk of our military power from the continent of Asia, and could eventually develop into World War III.

"We would have to assess the risk with each step taken. We would have to be prepared for countermeasures the Communists could take and the countermeasures that eventually the Soviet Union might take because of the Sino-Russian Treaty.

"Preliminary to this course of action, it would seem to me that

Senate Cloakroom

by Sen. J. Glenn Beall

The Voice of America has been very strongly criticized for what appears to be good and sufficient cause.

A broadcast in French, for French listeners, supposedly for the the purpose of giving the French a better understanding of the United States recently included the following statement:

"Miss Ferber knows the Texans well, whatever they may say to the contrary. The men drink bourbon by the gallon and the women are nitwits who talk but say practically nothing. And there are also the Mexican peons who work in the ranches and homes as servants and who live simple, harsh and difficult lives."

Michael G. Horneffer, a State Department employe, told a Senate committee that the above statement was made as part of a review of Edna Ferber's new novel, "The Giant." Many senators are curious as to what type of American propaganda such statements can be. You may be sure the State Department will quickly change the type of broadcasts which have been made in the past.

Hearings will be held very shortly on a bill of which I am a cosponsor for the purpose of establishing standby controls. The Senate Banking and Currency Committee, of which I am a member, has heard Secretary of State Dulles, and Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey, give the administration's views on economic controls. Following these hearings, which were held in executive session, I joined Senator Capehart in sponsoring a bill providing standby controls which could be invoked by the President in the event of a national emergency.

The bill provides for controls for a period not exceeding 90 days and would freeze prices, wages and rents. During the 90-day period of temporary controls the Congress would have an opportunity to study whatever permanent controls might be needed.

Each Tuesday new senators are lunching with cabinet officers for the purpose of becoming better acquainted and to exchange information. We have met with John Foster Dulles, secretary of State, and this week will have as our guest, Ezra Taft Benson, secretary of Agriculture.

Governor McKeldin has designated this week, March 1 to 7, as Maryland's "Save Your Vision Week." I urge everyone in Maryland to observe this week which is set aside for the purpose of educating the public in the fundamentals of eye care.

Ellender Says States Have Moral Right To Tidelands

By ALLEN J. ELLENDER
U. S. Senator from Louisiana

WASHINGTON — For the better part of the last decade the air has been thick with charges and countercharges by advocates of both sides of the tidelands oil controversy. Seldom has the debate on any subject produced so much heat.

It is risky to venture into the field of prediction, and I usually decline to do so, but I should like to make a prediction with regard to the tidelands problem. It is this: Congress will soon put the matter to rest by passing a bill which will vest title to the area in the states—as it should be. And I further predict President Eisenhower will approve the bill, making it a law.

Why am I so confident?

Because it is a matter of simple justice. The states have always assumed jurisdiction of the area from the earliest days of our nation's history. If the states don't own the tidelands, neither does the United States. Nobody even suggested that the national government might have any oil rights in the tidelands until recent legal action was undertaken to cast a cloud on the title of the states to the area.

There is a second and more compelling reason why the title of the states to the tidelands should be confirmed. The ever-encroaching hand of the federal government must be stayed at some point and if it cannot be stayed here, it cannot be stayed anywhere.

If the government can seize the tidelands oil of Louisiana, Texas and California, it can, under the same concepts, seize the iron mines of Minnesota, the coal of Pennsylvania or the steel mills of Chicago. Or just about anything else it makes up its mind to take, for that matter.

That this danger is appreciated by many thoughtful state officials is indicated by the fact that many of them, in areas far from the tidelands, have pledged their support to the cause of state control of the area.

Let us take a look at the history of the dispute. Until 1937, the right of the states to the ownership and control of the tidelands was unquestioned. Only navigation, a recognized power of the national government, was regulated from Washington.

Then, in 1937, the late Harold L. Ickes, then secretary of the interior, reversed himself and became the champion of the theory of federal ownership of the tidelands. Previously, Mr. Ickes had recognized the rights of the states in the matter. Between 1933 and 1937, he stated on 33 separate occasions that the states owned the tidelands.

Later, in various cases before the Supreme Court, that tribunal reversed many previous decisions to the effect that the states owned their offshore lands and ruled that the federal government has a "paramount right" to them.

The reasoning on which the court based its decisions is nothing short of amazing. Because the federal government has the obligation to protect the area, the court said, it has the paramount power and dominion over them.

Now what do these decisions prove? Very little, I think.

In the first place, even the Supreme Court expressly recognizes the right of Congress to deal with the tidelands, to restore full title to them to the states if it chooses.

(Which I predict Congress will do.)

Second, isn't it an incredible legal doctrine that holds that because the federal government has the duty to protect something, it also has the right to grab it? Carry this idea far enough and nothing is safe from appropriation by the long arm of the federal government.

This is bad law in my opinion. Under our Constitution, the federal government has only the powers expressly given it by that document. Not even one inch of land in the states is granted by the Constitution unless the federal government acquired it by deed or purchase.

One incidental bad effect of the Supreme Court's decision is to confuse the international boundaries of the United States. For example, pursuant to long-standing law and tradition, the state of Louisiana set its boundary 27 miles out at sea, toward the edge of the continental shelf. If Louisiana doesn't own this land, who does? Where is the international boundary?

There has been much talk about the national government losing a lot of revenue if the states are granted their rights of ownership in the tidelands. There is an easy answer to this objection. Under our present sky-high system of income taxes, the federal government will end up with the lion's share of the money no matter who is finally awarded the tidelands.

I think the whole matter boils down to a moral question of right and wrong. For many decades the states have been unchallenged in their rights of ownership. The federal government only became interested when it was learned that the tidelands are immensely valuable. In this matter, the moral right lies entirely on the side of the states, I believe.

Lawmakers Would Give Tennessee Back To Indians

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 4 (AP)—Six state legislators introduced this resolution in the Tennessee House of Representatives yesterday:

"Whereas the bonded indebtedness of the state of Tennessee has reached an all-time high and that taxes have now reached the saturation point.

"Therefore, be it resolved that the speaker appoint a committee to arrange a meeting with Chief Standing Deer of the Cherokee Indian nation, with authority to repeal the Treaty of Tellico Plains and thereby restore to said Indian nation that portion of land south of the Ohio River known as the state of Tennessee."

Today In Washington

the United Nations, and especially the United States, would have to make long-term foreign policy decisions on future relations in the Far East."

Recognition Of Treaty

If that isn't an adverse recommendation against one of the four courses of action, then the words of General Bradley don't mean what they say. It is surprising that the general hands the Moscow government on a platter a defensive argument by appearing to recognize the validity of the Sino-Russian Treaty. This pact has no standing whatever in the face of the United Nations resolution of 1950, which declared Communist China an aggressor and called on Soviet Russia, as well as all other member nations, to refrain from aiding any aggressor in the Korean War.

General Bradley is a great soldier and a fine likable personality, but he has a Maginot-line type of mind. He can see World War III only in terms of a march across Europe — which, of course, will be precipitated some day if the Allies allow themselves first to be driven out of Asia. Also, when he says that "broadened war" in the Far East "might pin down the bulk of our military power on the continent of Asia," he seems to overlook the fact that a considerable portion of the Soviet military power would be pinned down there, too, and that Russia's air power would be divided. For the Allies would seek to smash from the air the single thin railroad line across Siberia. After this vital supply line to China was destroyed, the war in the Far East would be over. Instead of defeatism and frustration, other military viewpoints are being expressed here by top military men—and they don't agree with General Bradley, either.

Senate Cloakroom

by Sen. J. Glenn Beall

The Voice of America has been very strongly criticized for what appears to be good and sufficient cause.

A broadcast in French, for French listeners, supposedly for the the purpose of giving the French a better understanding of the United States recently included the following statement:

"Miss Ferber knows the Texans well, whatever they may say to the contrary. The men drink bourbon by the gallon and the women are nitwits who talk but say practically nothing. And there are also the Mexican peons who work in the ranches and homes as servants and who live simple, harsh and difficult lives."

Michael G. Horneffer, a State Department employe, told a Senate committee that the above statement was made as part of a review of Edna Ferber's new novel, "The Giant." Many senators are curious as to what type of American propaganda such statements can be. You may be sure the State Department will quickly change the type of broadcasts which have been made in the past.

Hearings will be held very shortly on a bill of which I am a co-sponsor for the purpose of establishing standby controls. The Senate Banking and Currency Committee, of which I am a member, has heard Secretary of State Dulles, and Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey, give the administration's views on economic controls. Following these hearings, which were held in executive session, I joined Senator Capehart in sponsoring a bill providing standby controls which could be invoked by the President in the event of a national emergency.

The bill provides for controls for a period not exceeding 90 days and would freeze prices, wages and rents. During the 90-day period of temporary controls the Congress would have an opportunity to study whatever permanent controls might be needed.

Each Tuesday new senators are lunching with cabinet officers for the purpose of becoming better acquainted and to exchange information. We have met with John Foster Dulles, secretary of State, and this week will have as our guest, Ezra Taft Benson, secretary of Agriculture.

Governor McKeldin has designated this week, March 1 to 7, as Maryland's "Save Your Vision Week." I urge everyone in Maryland to observe this week which is set aside for the purpose of educating the public in the fundamentals of eye care.

Ellender Says States Have Moral Right To Tidelands

By ALLEN J. ELLENDER
U. S. Senator from Louisiana

WASHINGTON — For the better part of the last decade the air has been thick with charges and countercharges by advocates of both sides of the tidelands oil controversy. Seldom has the debate on any subject produced so much heat.

It is risky to venture into the field of prediction, and I usually decline to do so, but I should like to make a prediction with regard to the tidelands problem. It is this: Congress will soon put the matter to rest by passing a bill which will vest title to the area in the states—as it should be. And I further predict President Eisenhower will approve the bill, making it a law.

Why am I so confident?

Because it is a matter of simple justice. The states have always assumed jurisdiction of the area from the earliest days of our nation's history. If the states don't own the tidelands, neither does the United States. Nobody even suggested that the national government might have any oil rights in the tidelands until recent legal action was undertaken to cast a cloud on the title of the states to the area.

There is a second and more compelling reason why the title of the states to the tidelands should be confirmed. The ever-encroaching hand of the federal government must be stayed at some point and if it cannot be stayed here, it cannot be stayed anywhere.

If the government can seize the tidelands oil of Louisiana, Texas and California, it can, under the same concepts, seize the iron mines of Minnesota, the coal of Pennsylvania or the steel mills of Chicago. Or just about anything else it makes up its mind to take, for that matter.

That this danger is appreciated by many thoughtful state officials is indicated by the fact that many of them, in areas far from the tidelands, have pledged their support to the cause of state control of the area.

Let us take a look at the history of the dispute. Until 1937, the right of the states to the ownership and control of the tidelands was unquestioned. Only navigation, a recognized power of the national government, was regulated from Washington.

Then, in 1937, the late Harold L. Ickes, then secretary of the interior, reversed himself and became the champion of the theory of federal ownership of the tidelands. Previously, Mr. Ickes had recognized the rights of the states in the matter. Between 1933 and 1937, he stated on 33 separate occasions that the states owned the tidelands.

Later, in various cases before the Supreme Court, that tribunal reversed many previous decisions to the effect that the states owned their offshore lands and ruled that the federal government has a "paramount right" to them.

The reasoning on which the court based its decisions is nothing short of amazing. Because the federal government has the obligation to protect the area, the court said, it has the paramount power and dominion over them.

Now what do these decisions prove? Very little, I think.

In the first place, even the Supreme Court expressly recognizes the right of Congress to deal with the tidelands, to restore full title to them to the states if it chooses.

(Which I predict Congress will do.)

Second, isn't it an incredible legal doctrine that holds that because the federal government has the duty to protect something, it also has the right to grab it? Carry this idea far enough and nothing is safe from appropriation by the long arm of the federal government.

This is bad law in my opinion. Under our Constitution, the federal government has only the powers expressly given it by that document. Not even one inch of land in the states is granted by the Constitution unless the federal government acquired it by deed or purchase.

One incidental bad effect of the Supreme Court's decision is to confuse the international boundaries of the United States. For example, pursuant to long-standing law and tradition, the state of Louisiana set its boundary 27 miles out at sea, toward the edge of the continental shelf. If Louisiana doesn't own this land, who does? Where is the international boundary?

There has been much talk about the national government losing a lot of revenue if the states are granted their rights of ownership in the tidelands. There is an easy answer to this objection. Under our present sky-high system of income taxes, the federal government will end up with the lion's share of the money no matter who is finally awarded the tidelands.

I think the whole matter boils down to a moral question of right and wrong. For many decades the states have been unchallenged in their rights of ownership. The federal government only became interested when it was learned that the tidelands are immensely valuable. In this matter, the moral right lies entirely on the side of the states, I believe.

Lawmakers Would Give Tennessee Back To Indians

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 4 (AP)—Six state legislators introduced this resolution in the Tennessee House of Representatives yesterday:

"Whereas the bonded indebtedness of the state of Tennessee has reached an all-time high and that taxes have now reached the saturation point.

"Therefore, be it resolved that the speaker appoint a committee to arrange a meeting with Chief Standing Deer of the Cherokee Indian nation, with authority to repeal the Treaty of Tellico Plains and thereby restore to said Indian nation that portion of land south of the Ohio River known as the state of Tennessee."

Today In Washington

the United Nations, and especially the United States, would have to make long-term foreign policy decisions on future relations in the Far East."

Recognition Of Treaty

If that isn't an adverse recommendation against one of the four courses of action, then the words of General Bradley don't mean what they say. It is surprising that the general hands the Moscow government on a platter a defensive argument by appearing to recognize the validity of the Sino-Russian Treaty. This pact has no standing whatever in the face of the United Nations resolution of 1950, which declared Communist China an aggressor and called on Soviet Russia, as well as all other member nations, to refrain from aiding any aggressor in the Korean War.

General Bradley is a great soldier and a fine likable personality, but he has a Maginot-line type of mind. He can see World War III only in terms of a march across Europe — which, of course, will be precipitated some day if the Allies allow themselves first to be driven out of Asia. Also, when he says that "broadened war" in the Far East "might pin down the bulk of our military power on the continent of Asia," he seems to overlook the fact that a considerable portion of the Soviet military power would be pinned down there, too, and that Russia's air power would be divided. For the Allies would seek to smash from the air the single thin railroad line across Siberia. After this vital supply line to China was destroyed, the war in the Far East would be over. Instead of defeatism and frustration, other military viewpoints are being expressed here by top military men—and they don't agree with General Bradley, either.

Secrets Of Charm
by John Robert Powers

Your appearance can literally be grounded by what you choose to wear on your feet. No matter how careful you are to select the most becoming frock in the latest cut and coloring, a dowdy shoe can slay your otherwise, thoughtfully worked-out beguilement.

To earn the stamp of fashion authority, your shoes must look as smart as the rest of your costume. To achieve this smartness with a sleek-lady effect and not a raucous Diamond Lil look, let your shoes display their fashion awareness in subtle ways.

Shades to Note

For example, bright rather than dark navy take precedence this year. Smoked pearl is a better choice than the ligthter grays. Golden tan and oak, particularly in kid, are smarter than dark browns. Look for the kidskins that have been aniline dyed. They polish never before found in anything but antique wood.

In black, patent takes the honors. It does so with complete display a beautiful grain and comfort, what's more. The new patent kids are light in weight, pliable, drapable, and porous. Hold one of the new patent kids in your hand and note how easily it bends without any signs of cracking. That's how it will perform on your foot!

Personable Footwear

In the livelier colors, olive and mint greens lead. At their heels come rich "Spanish" reds, a sandalwood beige and for casual wear only an emerald green.

In daytime styles, your first choice is either a plain or conservatively-trimmed pump. In these, the tapered toe is "the" toe and the high-riding elasticized instep is "the" news item. For gala wear, gaining favor over the opera pump are strap, bandage and mule sandals. However, beware of "fishbowl" styles unless your foot is a poet's rhapsody.

A personable look about footwear is unquestionably the mark of the discerning.

The Mess Call

Some time ago during the heat of the campaign our pal Adlai Stevenson said, "If I am elected I will clean up the mess in Washing."

Whereupon a famous pianist who had played the White House asked, "What mess?"

When you're on the payside of the Potomac you've got to watch all directions. Don't forget that General Ross sailed up Bladensburg Creek.

In his Washington Day beef to Ohio collegians our equally old pal Bob Taft remarked, "Ike is well on his way to cleaning up the mess in Washington.

Bob went further with his mess call. He said, "There is a mess in Korea, there is a mess in economy and there is a mess in international relations.

Which three mess calls just about constitute emergency rations for a day for an old soldier like me.

Senators To Ask Study Of Problems At Savage Dam

A resolution will be introduced into the State Senate calling for the governor to appoint a group to study several problems at the Savage River Dam.

The resolution is being sponsored by Senators Robert B. Kimble of Allegany County and Neil C. Fraley of Garrett County.

The two problems concern a road that had to be relocated from the present bed of the dam and the Westernport water supply, according to Senator Fraley.

The Garrett County Senator explained an act of legislature in 1935 created the Upper Potomac River Commission and gave it authority to acquire land and supervise the construction of the Savage River Dam.

Under this act, all existing roads and bridges that would be flooded would have to be rebuilt by the commission. This was done, the senator said.

However, under the measure, there was no provision for the maintenance of these roads.

Senator Fraley said the road in question goes along the side of the dam and its water and is used as a school bus route. It is in need of repair, he explained.

The Upper Potomac River Commission has no funds, the senator said, and both Boards of County Commissioners of Allegany and Garrett counties maintain it is not their obligation.

The road, all in Garrett County, is located on the property of the State Department of Forests and Parks, the senator noted.

The resolution will also call for the appointed group to study the Westernport water supply which is obtained from the dam under an agreement with the Upper Potomac River Commission. This was inserted at the request of Del. Horace P. Whitworth Jr.

Senators Kimble and Fraley ask that the study group be comprised of the chairmen of the river commission and the State Roads Commission, the State Planning Commission, the director of the State Department of Forests and Parks, and the presidents of the two boards of county commissioners.

The group's report is to be made before the next session of legislature.

Senators To Ask Study Of Problems At Savage Dam

A resolution will be introduced into the State Senate calling for the governor to appoint a group to study several problems at the Savage River Dam.

The resolution is being sponsored by Senators Robert B. Kimble of Allegany County and Neil C. Fraley of Garrett County.

The two problems concern a road that had to be relocated from the present bed of the dam and the Westernport water supply, according to Senator Fraley.

The Garrett County Senator explained an act of legislature in 1935 created the Upper Potomac River Commission and gave it authority to acquire land and supervise the construction of the Savage River Dam.

Under this act, all existing roads and bridges that would be flooded would have to be rebuilt by the commission. This was done, the senator said.

However, under the measure, there was no provision for the maintenance of these roads.

Senator Fraley said the road in question goes along the side of the dam and its water and is used as a school bus route. It is in need of repair, he explained.

The Upper Potomac River Commission has no funds, the senator said, and both Boards of County Commissioners of Allegany and Garrett counties maintain it is not their obligation.

The road, all in Garrett County, is located on the property of the State Department of Forests and Parks, the senator noted.

The resolution will also call for the appointed group to study the Westernport water supply which is obtained from the dam under an agreement with the Upper Potomac River Commission. This was inserted at the request of Del. Horace P. Whitworth Jr.

Senators Kimble and Fraley ask that the study group be comprised of the chairmen of the river commission and the State Roads Commission, the State Planning Commission, the director of the State Department of Forests and Parks, and the presidents of the two boards of county commissioners.

The group's report is to be made before the next session of legislature.

Diesels Banned In W. Va. Mines

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 4 (AP)—The law as the Legislature wrote it in 1931 clearly prohibits the use of Diesel locomotives in coal mines, the West Virginia Supreme Court ruled yesterday.

If there is to be any other interpretation, the court said it would be up to the Legislature to change the wording of the statute.

The appellate judges, in an unanimous opinion by Judge James B. Riley, upheld a ruling by the Kanawha County Circuit Court that the use of petroleum as motive power for underground mining operations is prohibited.

The case grew out of efforts to place in operation in a McDowell County coal mine a Diesel locomotive by a manufacturing firm near Beckley.

The National Mine Service Co., which built the Diesel, and the Pond Creek Pocahontas Co., which wanted to use it, contended that the attitude of West Virginia authorities deprived the mining industry of an advanced technique.

They noted also that the U. S. Bureau of Mines had found the locomotive "completely safe and not harmful to the health of any miner."

The court took the position that the Legislature "intended to prohibit the use of petroleum as motive power in underground mines as being inherently dangerous and deletorious of the health and safety of the miners working therein."

Dr. Nuzum Reviews Book At Womans Club Meeting

MOOREFIELD — Dr. David Nuzum, head of the English Department at Potomac State School, Keyser, reviewed "The Velvet Doublet" by James Street at the meeting of the Moorefield Woman's Club Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Donald Baker.

Dr. Nuzum first introduced his listeners to the author, whom he described as a "veteran drug store romancer." Then he presented the story of Rodrigo, one of the sailors with Columbus on the first voyage of discovery, the man who really first sighted land. He concluded his remarks with an evaluation of the book, calling the style "historical filibuster" but stressing the fact that Mr. Street had given a realistic picture of the Spanish world in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries.

Mrs. F. Richard Troy, president, reminded the members that the club would hold a card party in the Public Library March 17, at 7:30 p. m. Bridge, canasta, five hundred and other card games will be played. Prizes will be awarded.

W.Va. High Court Orders Judge To Explain Action

The West Virginia State Supreme Court has ordered Berkeley County Circuit Judge Decatur H. Rodgers to explain why he refused to set aside the sale of Emery's Motor Coach Line, Inc., in compliance with a previous order of the high court.

The Supreme Court, which issued the new order in a mandamus suit brought by Robert L. Emery Jr., and the bus line, told Judge Rodgers to appear April 14 in Charleston before that tribunal to show why his latest order should not be overruled.

When the case was before the Supreme Court in 1951, Judge Rodgers was ordered to set aside the sale of the bus line's assets to Mellon National Bank of Pittsburgh on grounds that the trustees had not given sufficient notice before disposing of the property.

Emery said the circuit judge issued a decree last December 16 setting aside the sale, but on the next day set aside his own decree and ordered a new hearing in the case.

In his final ruling on December 19, Rodgers upheld the original sale, ruled that Emery had no right to maintain the suit, and dismissed the case.

"This action of the defendant is directly contrary to the earlier mandate of your honorable court," Emery contended.

Emery's bus line, before it was taken over, supplied routes between Cumberland, Paw Paw, Martinsburg and Washington.

Illinois School Offers Helicopter Flying Course

By NORMAN SKLAREWITZ
Central Press Correspondent

LOCKPORT, Ill.—At first glance, the quiet little campus of Lewis college here looks much the same as dozens of other small midwestern schools. However, this familiar picture of academic tranquility is thrown out of focus rather often these days by the ungainly antics of a Bell 47B helicopter hovering out behind the liberal arts building.

At Lewis the 'copter is as much a part of the local scene as football games, mid-term exams and winsome co-eds for this school offers a regular course in helicopter flying. It was, in fact, one of the first accredited schools in the nation to develop such a program in its curriculum and has since led in the field of rotary wing aviation.

Prospective "egg-beater" pilots now train here in a four-week program under two seasoned helicopter pilots, Albert H. Luke and Frank Krumwiede.

Luke is the school's airport manager and head of the aviation department and Krumwiede is chief pilot. History of the helicopter training course goes back to 1947—virtually the infancy of the industry.

In 1947 Luke, a veteran midwestern aviator, went to Bishop Bernard J. Sheil, senior auxiliary bishop of the Chicago diocese and founder of Lewis college, and suggested adding helicopter training to the already active flight department.

For almost 25 years the school had been a pioneer in aviation training and Luke forsaw the tremendous possibilities of 'copter flying. He also believed that the school would be filling a great need by being ready with a well-organized, carefully planned course of study when the craft were finally popularized.

Bishop Sheil immediately agreed and encouraged Luke's idea by authorizing the purchase of a Bell 47B.

The school administration worked out details of the course and its integration into existing studies. The Illinois state department of aeronautics approved the new helicopter school as did the department of public instruction.

The Civil Aeronautics Association had previously passed on it as operating in accordance with all government regulations.

Five students enrolled in the first class. Since that time dozens of flyers have taken it and received their ratings. The school has now added a new 'copter to its classroom "fleet."

The course includes 25 hours of individual flight instruction. There is no specific ground course but students are familiarized with the basic principles of maintenance by Bill Zelesnick, chief mechanic. All students must hold either a private license with 200 hours of solo flight or have a commercial rating before they can solo in the 'copter.

Most graduates go immediately into some phase of commercial 'copter flying these days. First woman to be licensed as a helicopter instructor in the United States was trained by Luke at Lewis college. She is Marillyn Hines, daughter of Lewis Hines, ex-Ohio congressman.

Grass runways of one of New Guinea's airports are kept smooth as a billiard table by residents of the area who cut the grass with their knives, says the National Geographic Society.

W.Va. High Court Orders Judge To Explain Action

The West Virginia State Supreme Court has ordered Berkeley County Circuit Judge Decatur H. Rodgers to explain why he refused to set aside the sale of Emery's Motor Coach Line, Inc., in compliance with a previous order of the high court.

The Supreme Court, which issued the new order in a mandamus suit brought by Robert L. Emery Jr., and the bus line, told Judge Rodgers to appear April 14 in Charleston before that tribunal to show why his latest order should not be overruled.

When the case was before the Supreme Court in 1951, Judge Rodgers was ordered to set aside the sale of the bus line's assets to Mellon National Bank of Pittsburgh on grounds that the trustees had not given sufficient notice before disposing of the property.

Emery said the circuit judge issued a decree last December 16 setting aside the sale, but on the next day set aside his own decree and ordered a new hearing in the case.

In his final ruling on December 19, Rodgers upheld the original sale, ruled that Emery had no right to maintain the suit, and dismissed the case.

"This action of the defendant is directly contrary to the earlier mandate of your honorable court," Emery contended.

Emery's bus line, before it was taken over, supplied routes between Cumberland, Paw Paw, Martinsburg and Washington.

House Plans Vote On Revised W. Va. Tax Bill

Chances Of Enactment Termed Remote

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 4 (AP)—The West Virginia House today quickly started an amended version of Gov. Marland's severance tax proposal on its way to a vote.

The amended bill was brought to the floor without recommendation by the Finance Committee soon after the session convened.

Immediately, a brief recess was called and the Rules Committee met to place the measure on the special calendar. The proposed tax would affect industries engaged in producing natural resources.

It cleared first reading and will be at amendment stage tomorrow. Opponents at that time are expected to try to kill the bill without waiting for it to reach third reading on Friday. That is the usual stage for a passage vote.

Enactment Remote

Even should the House pass the bill, its chances of enactment into law seemed remote.

It normally would pass through the Senate Finance Committee before coming to the floor of that chamber. The Senate finance group has killed its own version of the tax proposal in no uncertain terms, and has taken the additional action of ruling out taking up the subject again.

The Senate, during its one-hour session, voted unanimous approval of a resolution to create a 30-day budget session of the Legislature in even years and raise the pay of legislators from $500 to $1,500 a year.

The measure now goes to the House. The questions embodied in the resolution would be submitted to the people at the 1954 election.

Amendments written into the severance tax bill by the House finance committee are designed to help small producers by providing exemptions from the tax up to certain levels of production.

Would Benefit Roads

Some sources said the changes would not reduce by more than one million dollars the estimated 18 million dollars a year that the measure originally was designed to yield. Proceeds would be earmarked for roads and schools.

All coal production would have been taxed under the original bill at the rate of 10 cents a ton. The amended version exempts the first 2,000 tons of annual production from any tax. The rate would be five cents on the next 8,000 tons, and 10 cents on all over 10,000 tons.

The first 1,600 barrels of oil would be exempted from tax under the amended version. The original bill's rate of 25 cents per barrel would apply to production above that level.

There would be no tax on the first 3 million cubic feet of natural gas. The next 7 million cubic feet would be taxed at the rate of one-half cent per 1,000 cubic feet, and the original rate of one cent per 1,000 cubic feet would apply to all over 10 million cubic feet.

Briefing Is Planned On Industrial Route

Mayor Roy W. Eves and City Engineer Charles R. Nuzum will review the Fifth Street "Industrial Boulevard" proposal at the meeting of the South Cumberland Business Men's Association Monday at noon in the recreation hall of Grace Methodist Church.

George Millenson, president, said a discussion period will be held.

Fire Extinguished

East Side firemen were called to 1300-block Holland Street at 7:44 p. m. yesterday when rubbish being burned on a vacant lot by city employes flared up again. There was no damage.

Police Leave For Ohio To Nab Suspect

Humbertson Is Held In Series Of Thefts

Two city detectives left for Ohio yesterday to bring back a man wanted in connection with a string of burglaries which they said Francis George Humbertson, 27, Baker Street, had admitted early yesterday.

Detective Lt. James E. Van and Detective Leo E. P. Law did not name the alleged accomplice, but they said Humbertson had implicated him in the thefts.

Humbertson, who is awaiting sentencing in Circuit Court on other breaking and entry charges, reportedly signed a statement admitting several other thefts since November 18, 1950.

Early last month, Humbertson was arrested in connection with burglaries at the Perrin Building, the Law Building and Sunshine Feed Store. An accomplice, James Irvin Cranford, 29, was sentenced to six years in the Maryland Penitentiary Tuesday, but Humbertson's sentence was delayed.

Van, Law and Detective Roy C. Hawse said he admitted these crimes yesterday morning after several hours of questioning:

November 18, 1950, Humbertson entered the Liberty Trust Building and went through several offices. On November 28, 1950 he remained in the William Paca Club on North Centre Street after closing hours and escaped through a back window. Humbertson did not recall what was taken.

Humbertson said he entered the Maryland Theatre December 7, 1950, and January 12, 1951. Once he remained inside after closing hours. On both occasions he cut a hole in office doors. Several dollars were stolen the first time.

About December 11, 1951, Humbertson entered the American Legion Home on Harrison Street. He removed hinges from a door and took pins out of a safe door. He obtained money from a pinball machine after ransacking rooms and drawers.

Humbertson said he stayed in the Amvets Club after the place was closed for the night of December 16, 1950. He made an unsuccessful attempt to force a safe. Money was taken from a pinball machine.

Five days later the suspect forced a window at the rear of the Queen City Billiard Parlor at 19 North Liberty Street and took about $50.

On December 30, 1950, Humbertson added, he cut a hole in a rear door at the Dolphin Bar, 107 North Centre Street, and took about $90 from a cigar box behind the counter. About January 5, 1951, he used a steel ladder to enter the 40 & 8 Club, 113 Harrison Street, ransacked rooms but got nothing.

Nothing was stolen January 25, 1951, from the Craze Confectionery, 711 Maryland Avenue, after Humbertson cut a hole in a basement door. On January 28, 1951, he broke into Carolan's Tavern on North Centre Street and secured $239.

About March 15, 1951, according to Humbertson, he made a futile attempt to break into Racey & Lynn's Tavern on Williams Street. He forced a window at the rear of Armour and Company at 322 Commerce Street on March 30, 1951 and broke the dial on a safe. Nothing was taken from the latter establishment.

Humbertson also told of forcing a lock on a door at the Cumberland Lumber Company at Miltenberger Place. Sixteen dollars were stolen from the building.

sible the industrial promotion fund.

Saeli gave special credit to the industrial promotion committee of the Chamber of Commerce and the Chamber's recently created industrial promotion department.

"We hope this success," said Saeli, "will be the forerunner of many more successes industry-wise for Cumberland."

Butler said his firm has an unusual type of operation in that most of its products are original.

Relating briefly the history of the company, he explained that his firm "takes original items or devices with only the idea. Then we do the research, development, production and sales. We handle nothing that is not original."

Airtronic Research Corporation's original plant, located in Washington, employes from 150 to 200 persons. Butler, who attained the rank of commander, was a naval aviator in World War 11 and also was connected with scientific research during the war. He went into business for himself shortly after the war.

Edward J. Wegman, veterans employment representative with the employment service who handled that organization's contacts with Butler, said a tentative list of employes already is in Butler's hands.

Wegman gave special credit to trade schools of this area which have trained machinists under the GI bill. He said they contributed in a "large way" to decision of the new industry to locate here inasmuch as the machinists needed for production are available.

The Chamber of Commerce was not advised until early last night of the final decision by Airtronic Research to locate here. Shortly after the final decision was reached, Butler and his associates left Cumberland to return to Washington.

Highway Sinks Near Midland

A section of Route 36, between Frostburg and Midland, was reopened to traffic yesterday at noon after being closed Tuesday about 8 p. m. due to its sinking for a distance of over 100 feet.

G. Bates Chaires, district engineer for the State Roads Commission, said the section dropped up to 14 inches and after an inspection by James Close, engineer for the Consolidated Fuel Company, the road was opened.

A watchman is now on duty 24-hours a day for the next two days at the affected section the SRC engineer said.

The sink occurred in the same area near Midland where the State Roads Commission has had to fix three others since Memorial Day. Old mine workings falling in cause the sinks.

Chaires said the Cumberland Contracting Company which is not preparing bituminous concrete during winter months, is making every effort to mix a special batch to fill in the road.

Police Chief Given Suspended Jail Term

Stanley Davis, chief of police at Lonaconing, was given a 30-day suspended jail sentence yesterday in Trial Magistrate Court on a charge of assaulting his wife, Margaret Davis, Lonaconing, on February 27.

Magistrate Morris Baron suspended the sentence on condition Davis be of good behavior. Davis pleaded not guilty to the charge.

A property at 112-114 Frederick Street is being demolished by the owners, Mr. and Mrs. James Juliano, who plan to establish a parking lot on the site.

Juliano said the work will be completed within a few weeks and estimated the area will accomodate about 20 cars.

Unity Conference Will Meet Tonight

Legislation which affects labor will be discussed at a meeting of the Western Maryland Labor Unity Conference today at 8 p. m. in Allegany Trades Council Hall, Paul L. Burley, secretary, reported yesterday.

One of the projects, Burley said, will be to organize an active campaign against the passage of Senate Bill 215, which would prohibit labor membership as a requirement for employment.

Burley said the bill is patterned after Virginia's "right to work" act.

Former Champ Down In 7th, Wins Easily

5,525 Fans Witness Bout In Miami; Battle Televised

MIAMI, March 4 (AP)—Joey Maxim, a cutie from the old school, gave Tampa's Danny Nardico an early boxing lesson tonight but had to get off the deck from a seventh-round knockdown to win an unanimous 10-round decision at Miami Stadium before 5,525 fans. Maxim weighed 183½, Nardico 176½.

A right hand bomb by Nardico dumped Maxim on the floor for the first time in many a year toward the end of the seventh round after he had been teaching Nardico the art of the left jab. Pal Joey popped up about four but had to take the automatic eight-count. He held on to weather the storm that was Nardico's only threat.

Referee Cy Gottfried scored it 97-91, Judge Norton Ganger 95-94 and Judge Marty Monroe 98-94, all for Maxim. The AP card also was 97-91. Under Miami rules, point scoring is based on 10 points for the winner of a round with the loser getting nine, eight or seven, depending on the way he fought.

The 30-year-old Maxim, making his first start since losing his world light heavyweight title to Archie Moore at St. Louis, Dec. 17, had too much experience and boxing skill for the rugged Tampa youngster, who became an overnight sensation by becoming the first man ever to floor Jake LaMotta in their New Year's Eve bout.

Series Rubber Game Is Set For Tonight

Keyser High School and Martinsburg High School will battle it out tonight at Martinsburg in the third and deciding game of their series for the right to represent their section in the West Virginia Class "A" regional basketball tournament next month at Fairmont.

Coach John Coburn's Bulldogs won the opening game of the series on their home court last week, 64-59, but Keyser evened up accounts with the Berkeley Countians by taking the second game Tuesday night in Keyser by the score of 75-53.

Keyser and Martinsburg are the only Class "A" schools in the eastern counties of the state, hence the series to determine sectional honors.

Coach John Shelton's quint will be playing its 22nd game of the season. The Keyserites have won 13 games and lost eight.

Rookie infielder Walt Freese of the St. Louis Browns, was an all-around athlete at West Virginia University.

NEW YORK, March 4 (INS) — The International Boxing Club is trying hard to build up the third meeting of Joe Giardello and Billy Graham in the Garden Friday night as a "grudge" fight. Ho-hum. Pardon the yawn.

Real grudge fights in the ring are about as rare as bathing beauties among the eskimos. But fight press agents never quit trying to sell them.

Jack Dempsey was supposed to hold a bitter grudge against Gene Tunney in their second fight but Jack put the damper on that with this remark: "How," he asked in amazement, "could you have a grudge against anybody who is helping you to make a million bucks?"

How indeed? Fighters are business men. Although they might try to knock each other's brains out in the ring, outside the ropes they usually are more cordial than a diplomat. As a matter of fact they may be close friends as were Benny Leonard and Johnny Dundee who fought each other eight times.

The only real grudge fight we can recall in the last 20 years was the second bout between Joe Louis and Max Schmeling. You will recall that Joe's assault was so swift, vicious and deadly that he sent Max to the hospital with a busted sacroiliac within two minutes.

Joe himself admitted that was the only time in his life he ever had any personal feeling against an opponent. And the feeling was engendered, not because Max had knocked him out in 12 rounds the first time but because Max said that Joe was yellow and had quit.

We recall one real grudge fight but it was fought in a New York gymnasium and not in public. It happened this way. Kid Norfolk, a great negro heavyweight, and Panama Joe Gans, a fine welter, were stablemates under the management of the late Leo P. Flynn. Gans had been belting out middleweights, light heavies and even an occasional heavy and he began thinking he could even beat Norfolk.

Felling between the men grew so bitter that Flynn finally called them together and said: "Since I manage you both I can't put you on in any ring. So you two fellows go up to the gym, don regular fighting gloves and we'll stage a regular bout to settle this matter once and for all."

They followed Flynn's advice and what Norfolk did to Panama Joe was a crime. Within half a minute he had Panama Joe cut to ribbons but he refused to knock him out. He would hold Joe up and belt him silly. One round of that kind of punishment was more than enough for Joe. He had learned his lesson.

Another ring feud we recall was that between Kayo Chaney and Frankie Rice, jealous bantams and stablemates. Rice quit the stable and challenged Chaney.

Chaney was quick to accept the challenge and flattened Rice in one round.

Yes, "grudge" fights may be good for luring the sucker dollars but they rarely happen.

Durocher Picks Hurlers For Giants Openers

PHOENIX, Ariz., March 4 (AP) Manager Leo Durocher today named Veteran Southpaw Dave Koslo and Rookie Righthanders Dick Adair and Mario Picone as his pitchers in the New York Giants' opening 1953 exhibition game against the Cleveland Indians in Tucson Saturday.

For the Sunday return engagement with the Indians in Phoenix, Durocher picked Frank Hiller, Max Lanier and Jim Hearn.

The Giants played their second and final intra-squad game today, the Yannigans defeating the Regulars, 2-0, with the help of Clint Hartung's bat. The big outfielder drove in both runs with a single and triple.

Jim Jeffries, Former Champ, Succumbs At 77

Lost His Only Bout To Jack Johnson

BURBANK, Calif., March 4 (AP)—The last of the line of the oldtime heavyweight boxing kings, James J. Jeffries, is gone.

Big Jim, whose fists and magnificent stature ruled prizefighting from 1899 until 1905, died peacefully at the family home here last night.

Jeffries, called by many the greatest of 'em all in an era that began with John L. Sullivan, ranged through "Ruby Robert" Fitzsimmons and James J. Corbett and ended with himself, was 77.

Victim Of Stroke

Apparently the victim of a stroke, Jeffries had been in poor health since he was first hit by partial paralysis in February, 1946.

He lived with a niece, Mrs. Lillian Bull, in the home he built in Burbank nearly 50 years ago.

Big Jim, his friends say, never lost but two bouts. One was his knockout by Jack Johnson at Reno, Nev. when Jeffries tried a comeback after a five year retirement.

The other came when Jim's wife was killed Feb. 4, 1941, by an automobile as she crossed a street near here. "That took a lot out of Jim," an intimate said.

Jeffries had been far from spry these past few years, but he maintained an active interest in sports, particularly boxing and baseball. Even when in bed, he'd prop himself up and watch the event on television.

Minister's Son

Jeffries was born in a log cabin at Caroll, O. April 15, 1875, son of a Methodist minister. Jim was the sixth of a family of eight children. They moved to California when he was a small lad.

He captured the world championship at Coney Island, N. Y. June 9, 1899, when he knocked out Bob Fitzsimmons in the 11th round.

Jeffries' triumphs included victories over the California dancing master, Corbett; a second triumph over Fitzsimmons, and two brutal voctories over his close friend of later years, Sailor Tom Sharkey.

Cardinals May Need New Training Base

ST. PETERSBURG, Fa., March 4 (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals may have to find a new training camp after 1954.

Under a 10-year contract signed by Fred M. Saigh and city officials after Saigh took over the club in 1947, City Council can call off the arrangements two years after the ball club is sold.

Saigh, sentenced to 15 months in prison for income tax evasion, recently sold the club to Anheuser-Busch Inc. Stockholders of the brewery are expected to approve the purchase next week.

Robert Koch, department junior legion baseball chairman of Maryland will be present at the confab and plans will be outlined for the coming season in the Mountain District.

Five teams have indicated tentative plans to play in the district this season. They are Cumberland Westernport, Frostburg, Midland, and Barton.

Rymkus To Coach

CALGARY, March 4 (AP) — Lou Rymkus, star tackle with the Cleveland Browns for five seasons, signed today as an assistant to Head Coach Bob Snyder of the Calgary Stampeders of the Western Interprovincial Football Union.

As You Were

Here is a big right hander who started pitching baseball for Carlos when he was 15 years old and 22 years later he wound up his career with Charley Doyle's Cumberland Old Germans, 1944 champions of the Pen-Mar League.

A native of Carlos, he worked in the mines from 1925 to 1932. He and his dad dug coal and he also was brakeman on a motor at Midlothian mine for seven years. In 1929 and 1930 he had tryouts with the Cumberland Colts of the Middle Atlantic League and in 1931 turned down Manager "Hooker" Joe Phillips' offer for a tryout with the Jeannette Jays of the same league.

From 1932 to 1940 he drove a Potomac Edison Company bus and from 1932 to 1944 he pitched for Potomac Edison, Cumberland Eagles, Frostburg Demons, Cumberland Legion Semi-Pros, Hyndman, Centerville and the Old Germans.

During his baseball career he learned that "19" was his unlucky number.

In 1935 he was sailing along on an 18-game winning streak and lost his next time out in 12 innings to the American Legion, 7-4, at Taylor Field. He had knocked off 12 straight in 1934 and added six more victories the following year.

On September 13, 1936, he hooked up with Earl Johnson, former New York Yankee southpaw, in a 19-inning game at Community Park, and lost 5-2 to the Grant Town Pirates of Fairmont, W. Va. This is one of the longest sandlot games on record here and he was hurling for the Cumberland Legion Semi-Pros at the time.

It was also in 1936 that he struck out Lewis "Hack" Wilson, former National League home run king, then with Martinsburg, with the bases full. He took over as relief pitcher in the second inning with the bases loaded and the score 7-0 against him. He whiffed the first batter, then fanned Wilson after working the count to 3 and 2, and forced the third batsman to pop to the infield. He proceeded to blank Martinsburg the rest of the way and won the game, 13-7.

What's this pitcher's name?

This fast ball twirler of bygone days is James G. "Scotty" Stevenson, who is now serving his 13th year as clerk to the Board of Allegany County Commissioners. In 1951 he managed the Lions, champions of the Cumberland Hot Stove League. His son George, now in the Air Force, was regular first baseman of Fort Hill High School teams for two seasons. He has two other boys, James and Allan.

Heavy Title Fight To Be Filmed In 3-D

NEW YORK, March 4 (INS) — The International Boxing Club announced today that United Artists has purchased the rights for three-dimensional filming of the April 10 Rocky Marciano — Jersey Joe Walcott heavyweight title fight at Chicago.

The announcement said the three-dimensional film will be "the only movie of the fight for exhibition purposes."

Robinson Hits Triple

VERO BEACH, Fla., March 4 (AP) —Jackie Robinson continued his terrific slugging as the Brooklyn Dodger regulars played a 3-3, six-inning tie with the scrubs today.

Robinson's triple sent his team off to a two-run lead in the first inning. Billy Loes, who allowed four hits in three innings, was the victim.

Sunday Opponent For Old Germans Not Yet Decided

A Sunday opponent for the Cumberland Old Germans is not definitely decided upon, Player-Coach Bob Pence said last night.

Arrangements had tentatively scheduled the classy Charles Town American Legion quint here for an afternoon battle on SS. Peter and Paul court but because of an injury to Skip Hill, stellar Legion center, the Charles Town team is reluctant to appear undermanned.

Charles Town defeated the Old Gees there several weeks ago by a 90-72 count and arrangements were made for them to play here Sunday at 2:30 p.m. However with Hill nursing a sprained ankle the Legion team has not let the Old Germans management know if the Charles Town quint will make the trip.

Pence stated last night if Charles Town fails to agree to appear the Germans will attempt to play in Hagerstown Sunday afternoon. If this arrangement fails the team will be idle this weekend.

FROSTBURG, March 4 — Beall High's grapplers dropped their fourth straight match here tonight to the Somerset High matmen before a good crowd at the Mountaineers' gym. The final score was 27 to 9.

The victory was the fifth in 13 matches for Somerset while Coach Ray Hull's Mounties have yet to rack up a triumph since entering the wrestling game for the first time this season.

Bill Eichhorn, 145-pounder, scored his third win in four matches for Beall.

LaSalle Closes With 61 To 34 Win Over Savage

Last Period Spurt Brings 16th Victory

Coach Art Slocum's LaSalle High Explorers closed their 1952-53 season last night with a 61-34 victory over the Mt. Savage Indians on the latter's court.

Mt. Savage, also closing out their season, gave the Explorers a battle for nearly three periods before a late spurt by the Slocumen put the game out of reach of the Indians. The victory was the 16th in 24 games for LaSalle while Mt. Savage ended with a 3-15 mark.

LaSalle took an early lead and held a 13-10 advantage at the close of the first period but Mt. Savage rallied to edge ahead 25-24 at intermission.

Barney Spearman's goal as the third stanza opened put LaSalle ahead to stay. Marty Mullaney connected for two points to make it 28-25 LaSalle. Following a goal by Mt. Savage's Elder Bill Dove hit twice from the floor to bulge the Explorer margin and LaSalle was never headed thereafter.

The Explorers held a 37-31 lead at the end of the third period and then outscored Mt. Savage 24-3 in a tremendous fourth period to completely rout the home quint.

Marty Mullaney was the big gun for LaSalle with 20 points on seven goals and 6 of 8 foul shots. Hugh Nolan contributed 11 points in a winning cause for LaSalle. Elder was top man for Mt. Savage with 15 tallies.

The LaSalle Jayvees won the preliminary, 51-41. The lineups:

The nominees are Marty Mullaney and Charles Kienhofer, LaSalle; George McGregor and Jim Farris, Fort Hill; Colin Detrick and Robert Bradley, Ridgeley, and Bill Turner and Dick Rank, Allegany.

Wolfpack Again Favored As SC Tourney Begins

Maryland Meets Duke In First Round Today

RALEIGH, N. C., March 4 (AP)—The Southern Conference basketball championship tournament gets under way here tomorrow with the same setting, almost the same cast and the same old script—North Carolina State against the field.

For the last six years State has run off with the honors. If the Wolfpack can make it No. 7 in the finals Saturday night it will go on to next week's Eastern NCAA regionals here as conference representatives.

Opening Round Today

The four-game first round program looks like this:

Furman vs. West Virginia 2 p. m. (EST).

Duke vs. Maryland 4 p. m.

Richmond vs. Wake Forest 7:30 p. m.

North Carolina State vs. North Carolina 9.

The 12,400 seats of Reynolds Coliseum were virtually sold out long ago.

The opening afternoon game brings together the nation's top scoring team, Furman, and West Virginia, ranked No. 9. Furman has averaged more than 90 points in winning 21 of 26 games this season and in Frank Selvy has the top major point-maker, with an average of over 29 points a game.

Terps Meet Duke

The 4 o'clock game offers an interesting study in contrast. Duke, No. 4 scoring team in the land, runs into Maryland, No. 2 defensive club. A year ago with much the same conditions prevailing, Duke squeezed out a last-minute 51-48 victory over the Terps.

Wake Forest, No. 5 on the national scoring list at the last report, makes its first appearance in the tournament in three years. Its opponent, Richmond, has been away from this post-season play since 1947. The freshman-loaded Spiders have been one of the surprises of the year.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif., March 4 (AP)—Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, is enroute to Australia to check on preparations for the 1956 games.

He proceeded to blank Martinsburg the rest of the way and won the game, 13-7.

What's this pitcher's name?

This fast ball twirler of bygone days is James G. "Scotty" Stevenson, who is now serving his 13th year as clerk to the Board of Allegany County Commissioners. In 1951 he managed the Lions, champions of the Cumberland Hot Stove League. His son George, now in the Air Force, was regular first baseman of Fort Hill High School teams for two seasons. He has two other boys, James and Allan.

NEW YORK, March 4 (INS) — The International Boxing Club announced today that United Artists has purchased the rights for three-dimensional filming of the April 10 Rocky Marciano — Jersey Joe Walcott heavyweight title fight at Chicago.

The announcement said the three-dimensional film will be "the only movie of the fight for exhibition purposes."

Robinson Hits Triple

VERO BEACH, Fla., March 4 (AP) —Jackie Robinson continued his terrific slugging as the Brooklyn Dodger regulars played a 3-3, six-inning tie with the scrubs today.

Robinson's triple sent his team off to a two-run lead in the first inning. Billy Loes, who allowed four hits in three innings, was the victim.

Sunday Opponent For Old Germans Not Yet Decided

A Sunday opponent for the Cumberland Old Germans is not definitely decided upon, Player-Coach Bob Pence said last night.

Arrangements had tentatively scheduled the classy Charles Town American Legion quint here for an afternoon battle on SS. Peter and Paul court but because of an injury to Skip Hill, stellar Legion center, the Charles Town team is reluctant to appear undermanned.

Charles Town defeated the Old Gees there several weeks ago by a 90-72 count and arrangements were made for them to play here Sunday at 2:30 p.m. However with Hill nursing a sprained ankle the Legion team has not let the Old Germans management know if the Charles Town quint will make the trip.

Pence stated last night if Charles Town fails to agree to appear the Germans will attempt to play in Hagerstown Sunday afternoon. If this arrangement fails the team will be idle this weekend.

The victory was the fifth in 13 matches for Somerset while Coach Ray Hull's Mounties have yet to rack up a triumph since entering the wrestling game for the first time this season.

Bill Eichhorn, 145-pounder, scored his third win in four matches for Beall.

Last Period Spurt Brings 16th Victory

Coach Art Slocum's LaSalle High Explorers closed their 1952-53 season last night with a 61-34 victory over the Mt. Savage Indians on the latter's court.

Mt. Savage, also closing out their season, gave the Explorers a battle for nearly three periods before a late spurt by the Slocumen put the game out of reach of the Indians. The victory was the 16th in 24 games for LaSalle while Mt. Savage ended with a 3-15 mark.

LaSalle took an early lead and held a 13-10 advantage at the close of the first period but Mt. Savage rallied to edge ahead 25-24 at intermission.

Barney Spearman's goal as the third stanza opened put LaSalle ahead to stay. Marty Mullaney connected for two points to make it 28-25 LaSalle. Following a goal by Mt. Savage's Elder Bill Dove hit twice from the floor to bulge the Explorer margin and LaSalle was never headed thereafter.

The Explorers held a 37-31 lead at the end of the third period and then outscored Mt. Savage 24-3 in a tremendous fourth period to completely rout the home quint.

Marty Mullaney was the big gun for LaSalle with 20 points on seven goals and 6 of 8 foul shots. Hugh Nolan contributed 11 points in a winning cause for LaSalle. Elder was top man for Mt. Savage with 15 tallies.

The LaSalle Jayvees won the preliminary, 51-41. The lineups:

LaSalle	G	F	Mt. Savage	G	F
Dove f	4	1-2	Carter f	2	2-3
Nolan f	4	3-3	Walsh f	3	1-3

The contest is scheduled for the Amvets' Home.

Maryland Meets Duke In First Round Today

RALEIGH, N. C., March 4 (AP)—The Southern Conference basketball championship tournament gets under way here tomorrow with the same setting, almost the same cast and the same old script—North Carolina State against the field.

For the last six years State has run off with the honors. If the Wolfpack can make it No. 7 in the finals Saturday night it will go on to next week's Eastern NCAA regionals here as conference representatives.

Opening Round Today

The four-game first round program looks like this:

Furman vs. West Virginia 2 p. m. (EST).

Duke vs. Maryland 4 p. m.

Richmond vs. Wake Forest 7:30 p. m.

North Carolina State vs. North Carolina 9.

The 12,400 seats of Reynolds Coliseum were virtually sold out long ago.

The opening afternoon game brings together the nation's top scoring team, Furman, and West Virginia, ranked No. 9. Furman has averaged more than 90 points in winning 21 of 26 games this season and in Frank Selvy has the top major point-maker, with an average of over 29 points a game.

Terps Meet Duke

The 4 o'clock game offers an interesting study in contrast. Duke, No. 4 scoring team in the land, runs into Maryland, No. 2 defensive club. A year ago with much the same conditions prevailing, Duke squeezed out a last-minute 51-48 victory over the Terps.

Wake Forest, No. 5 on the national scoring list at the last report, makes its first appearance in the tournament in three years. Its opponent, Richmond, has been away from this post-season play since 1947. The freshman-loaded Spiders have been one of the surprises of the year.

Enroute To Australia

Greene Claims TV Hurts Boxing

Steady Decline Seen In Talent

CORAL GABLES, Fla., March 4 (AP) — National Boxing Association Commissioner Abe J. Greene said today that many boxing commissions are being "TV'd out of existence." He called upon television to join forces with the NBA to prevent this and to preserve boxing as a sport.

Speaking at the annual meeting of the Florida Federation of Boxing Boards, Greene warned that boxing is in danger of declining "into a rat race for talent which will no longer exist because its sources will have been dried up."

With five nights of the week taken up by nationally televised shows, smaller boxing clubs are being forced out of existence and even localized TV shows are being squeezed out, Greene said.

Unless the television people cooperate in protecting the small clubs where new talent is developed, he added, the sponsors may find themselve paying for second and third-rate talent and palming it off unwittingly as top flight showmanship. This might result in the loss of interest on the part of TV boxing fans or a revulsion which could bring demands for the destruction of the sport.

Harness Group May Get On Commission

ANNAPOLIS, March 4 (AP)—Harness representatives won a round today in their long fight to be represented on the Maryland Racing Commission.

The House Ways and Means Committee approved a bill which would guarantee them at least two representatives of their sport on the commission.

The House of Delegates adopted the favorable report without a word of debate. One more vote on the bill is necessary to pass it in the House and go over to the Senate.

The bill will raise the present membership from three to five and require that two of them shall be harness sportsmen.

Steady Decline Seen In Talent

CORAL GABLES, Fla., March 4 (AP) — National Boxing Association Commissioner Abe J. Greene said today that many boxing commissions are being "TV'd out of existence." He called upon television to join forces with the NBA to prevent this and to preserve boxing as a sport.

Speaking at the annual meeting of the Florida Federation of Boxing Boards, Greene warned that boxing is in danger of declining "into a rat race for talent which will no longer exist because its sources will have been dried up."

With five nights of the week taken up by nationally televised shows, smaller boxing clubs are being forced out of existence and even localized TV shows are being squeezed out, Greene said.

Unless the television people cooperate in protecting the small clubs where new talent is developed, he added, the sponsors may find themselve paying for second and third-rate talent and palming it off unwittingly as top flight showmanship. This might result in the loss of interest on the part of TV boxing fans or a revulsion which could bring demands for the destruction of the sport.

Harness Group May Get On Commission

ANNAPOLIS, March 4 (AP)—Harness representatives won a round today in their long fight to be represented on the Maryland Racing Commission.

The House Ways and Means Committee approved a bill which would guarantee them at least two representatives of their sport on the commission.

The House of Delegates adopted the favorable report without a word of debate. One more vote on the bill is necessary to pass it in the House and go over to the Senate.

The bill will raise the present membership from three to five and require that two of them shall be harness sportsmen.

Keeping Up With Hollywood

by Louella Parsons

HOLLYWOOD, March 4 (INS)—Vittorio Gassman's career seems to take him farther and farther away from Shelley Winters. He's to be Elizabeth Taylor's leading man in "Rhapsody" and the scenes will be shot in Switzerland by Charles Vidor, who leaves for St. Moritz and Zurich very soon.

Elizabeth will be able to work in six weeks, and it's problematical whether she will go to Switzerland for her scenes. After Vittorio finishes in Switzerland he will return to Hollywood, but that should be very late in April or early May. He meets Vidor in Switzerland as soon as he closes in "Hamlet."

Larry Weingarten, the producer, is very high on this story, which you may remember is that of an American girl who falls so in love with a concert pianist that she almost wrecks his career.

Everyone on the MGM lot is keeping fingers crossed that Mario Lanza will return March 12 to start "The Student Prince." Mario has been in conferences with Eddie Mannix and he's only ten pounds overweight.

After all the experiences, however, that MGM has had with Mario promising to come back and then at the last minute not showing up, there will be no announcement out of the studio until Mario actually steps before the camera.

Whether a reconciliation with Joan Bennett is in the cards or not, Walter Wanger is sure of his next business move.

He goes to Sol Lesser as co-producer of "Three-D Follies," the first 3-D musical with Lily St. Cyr and Gussie Moran already in the cast. Sol is frank in saying most of the production chores will fall to Walter because he is occupied on two other pictures.

The Wanger-Lesser tieup, however, is not permanent. When the musical is finished, Wanger returns to his Allied Artists deal.

Eddie Cantor wires, "it was nice to read in your column that Jimmy Durante is to star in a musical. But what actually promps this telegram is my interest in Schnozzola playing a barber.

"The very first haircut I ever got was at the hands of Jimmy's wonderful dad who had a barbershop on the East Side of New York City around the corner from Public School No. 1 which Jimmy and I attended. With his nose and my eyes we were the first three dimensional comedians in our school days! Love and kisses, Eddie Cantor."

Chatter in Hollywood:

The ballerina Bob Taylor was so smitten with last year, Ludmilla Tcherino, arrives in Hollywood April 1 to test for a long term contract at Universal-International.

I don't believe she and Bob will resume because he's taken up with Ursula Thiess. Ludmila, who was very sad after the death of her husband, wasn't really interested in Bob — or anyone else. But I hear now she has someone new in Paris.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

Yvonne De Carlo is in London — but she will NOT be delighted to learn that Carlos Thompson was at Jack's at the Beach with Katy Jurado. Near or far, Yvonne has dibs on Carlos.

Frank Sinatra was surprised — and pleased — when the crowd at Ciro's gave him a hand when he walked in with Axel Stordahl. But when El Martino invited him to sing, Frankie said, "I haven't got the $1,000 to pay the fine!"

Anne Baxter won't know it until she reads it here, but five minutes after she left home for Dallas, the high winds blew down a giant eucalyptus that crashed against her roof.

Speaking of storms, Russell Nype's bride-to-be, Diantha Manders, is keeping her fingers crossed that his plane will be able to get out of Minneapolis tomorrow in time for their Saturday wedding. Baby, it's cold outside.

That's all today. See you tomorrow.

Deepest water yet known lies in the Pacific between Guam and Yap, 35,640 feet deep.

STAG LINES for men

by Bert Bacharach

Preston Picks One for Warmth

Practical Vest

FASHION: Last week this space presented a showy newcomer among vests, made of tie silk. Now we reintroduce a practical old standby—the sweater-vest. Actor Robert Preston (at left) owns one that combines the looks of a fancy waistcoat with the warmth of good wool.

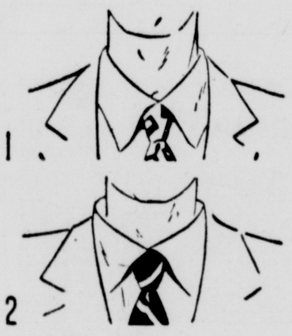
Amateur Barman: Here's a drink that will impress your guests no end. Fill goblet with shaved ice and pour in, in order: a split of champaign, a jigger of Grand Marnier and a dash of vanilla. Serve. . . . If you're a calory counter, here's a drink index: Cognac is low—only seventy-five calories a serving. A jigger of Scotch has 107; rye, 122; martini, 143; and, to top them all—Manhattan, 167.

Odd Items: Men who like suspenseful yarns will go for the new book "The Colditz Story," by P. R. Reid. Every page of this true narrative is jammed with excitement. . . . We recently advised placing lemons in warm water for more juice. A reader advises: "Better still, place them in a warm oven and you'll double the juice output." . . . That magic-like device we'd heard about, which raises a car's top and windows at the first drop of rain, is now on the market. It's called "Weather-Guard." . . . Speaking of cars, here's an anniversary note: Just fifty years ago this spring, the first auto trip across the North American continent was started. Time from New York to San Francisco: two months eight days.

Handyman: To keep shampoo bottle from slipping out of wet hands, circle it with two rubber bands, top and bottom. . . . Hardened and shrunken vacuum bottle corks can be restored to their former and better condition by boiling for a short time in a covered pan of water. . . . Next time you sow grass on your lawn, color the seeds with bluing. Birds find it unappetizing—and it doesn't hurt the seeds.

Dress Tips: Put a small dot of indelible ink or some other identifying mark on the labels of your shirts with French cuffs. It will save you unfolding shirts to find which cuffs are which. . . . Uncolored talcum powder, rubbed into spots on clothes and then rubbed off, will remove most of the blemishes.

Collared: Among the worst flaws in good grooming today is the number of oversized shirts being worn. This is the outgrowth of wearing ties with sport shirts. See that your collars don't show the faults shown in the drawings at right. They are not exaggerated, but actual tracings of recent news photographs. On one man (1) the collar is so low it reveals entire neck and top of chest. The other (2) wears so loose a collar that a whole fist could fit between his neck and the shirt.



Pass the Cigars: And some hearty congratulations—this week to John Cameron Swayze. He just celebrated the fifth anniversary of his TV "news caravan"—quite a feat, in that ever-changing medium.

My New York

by Mel Heimer

NEW YORK — It may startle the average upperclass husband in New York, to learn that his beloved bride — his paragon of virtue, his Diana of the hunt, his golden girl — sometimes behaves like a drunken fishwife with no manners, during those dark hours when he is at his desk, torn from her wonderful presence.

This I picked up from an expert on the subject. Her name is Mia Grau and she is an apricot-haired Austrian female with large eyes and attractive mien, who, likely, has a monopoly on the staging of fashion shows for charity around Manhattan.

Miss Grau spent some time describing to me her business and its intricacies, but although her language was more delicate than mine and her tolerance far greater, she did confess that sometimes the women attending these fashion shows are harder to manage than Kaufstein's Trained Lions. Not that they faze Mia. She controls them.

"Like Milton Berle ad-libbing to stop the hecklers in a night club," she told me with a grin. "I've got a routine down. You see, I do the commentaries on these fashion shows, and when the women get too noisy and gossipy, I just say a little tartly, 'Well, if you can hear me as well as I can hear you, everything's just fine.' Or, I say, in extreme cases: 'Will you please stop your yapping?' "

Actually, the babbling of these be-minked and awash-in-perfume guests — who pay from $7.50 to $50 for seats at these luncheon shows and thus maybe feel entitled to chatter on endlessly — is, in a way, forgivable. Forgivable, at least, by Mia Grau. She claims that most of the time they are not gossiping so much as they are discussing the dresses being shown. Only thing, they don't discuss very quietly.

"They see a nice gown on some model and immediately they yell across the table 'Mabel!!! Wouldn't that be just the thing for my next trip to Florida?' and so on and on. They don't mean to be rude," Mia said.

Miss Grau, who is from Graz — and that sounds like a comedy routine — is a girl who really found this the land of opportunity; she came here early in the war, as a child still neurotic from London's bombings, and went through our educational system like a jet fighter.

She was graduated from Hunter whether European styles were better than American at this stage in history, and I asked her.

"That's a dangerous question to answer for someone in my work," she said, "because I present clothes designed by both European and American stylists." I agreed it was dangerous and I waited for her to answer.

"Well, I guess I like American ones better," she said. "And there doesn't seem any doubt in my mind now that America — meaning New York — is becoming the world style center. A great many of the big European designers are College at 18. Then she plunged into the world of fashion and today is the woman who stages 90 per cent of the style shows for charity in New York.

She has also been on television a great deal and has her sights set on that field. However, she doesn't want to leave fashions altogether. She seemed like a pretty good authority to ask about moving their ateliers here."

Furthermore, she declared that the European designers have a harder time fitting European women, because they have such peculiar shapes. Most European designers — that means most French designers — make two lines, one for home consumption and one for American markets. The clothes worn by French-women are much more exotic, lavish and generally frou-frou.

"That's because 80 per cent of American married women seem to work during the day, and they need stylish clothes that can be almost business-like and cocktailish at the same time," she said. "Most European women just lounge around all day and get dressed to go out about 5 p.m. I know. I've got an aunt in Paris who does just that. It's a wonderful life."

Expert Says Man Is Burying Himself Under Weight Of Printed Matter

BALTIMORE, March 4 (AP)—Man, an expert said yesterday, is in danger of burying himself alive beneath the weight of his own printed matter.

It has become so bad, said Dr. Lowell J. Reed, vice-president of Johns Hopkins University, that worthwhile ideas may be lost forever unless machines replace the human mind in the indexing, coding and classifying of printed information.

Dr. Reed welcomed about 200 scientists and librarians to a symposium on "Machine Techniques in Scientific Documentation."

Verner W. Clapp, chief assistant librarian of Congress in Washington, underlined the problem.

By 1947, he reported, 10,000 medical journals were being published each year. They contained about 200,000 articles.

There are between a million and two million scientific articles in print that his librarians have not had time to catalog, Clapp said, and the backlog is growing at a rate of about 215,000 a year.

Dr. Sanford W. Larkey, who is directing a medical indexing project at the Johns Hopkins Medical Library, showed the visitors some machines designed to index, code and classify scientific publications.

Card of Thanks

We wish to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to all our friends, neighbors and relatives for the kindnesses extended to us during our recent sad bereavement, the death of our husband and father, Leroy E. Stapleton. We also wish to thank those who sent floral tributes, those who donated the use of their cars for the funeral, the pallbearers, and Rev. R. C. Scrogum.
Wife & Children.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of Kenneth W. Baker who passed away March 5th, 1944.
Beyond the sunset, Oh glad reunion
With our dear loved one
Who has gone before.
In that fair Homeland
We'll know no parting,
Beyond the sunset forever more.
Sadly missed by his parents, brothers and sisters.

In memory of Howard O. Strawser who passed away six years ago, March 5, 1947.
Today will bring sad memories,
Of our loved one gone to rest,
Who will always be remembered
By those who loved him best.
Sadly missed by his wife & children.

Card of Thanks

We wish to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to all our friends, neighbors and relatives for the kindnesses extended to us during our recent sad bereavement, the death of our husband and father, Leroy E. Stapleton. We also wish to thank those who sent floral tributes, those who donated the use of their cars for the funeral, the pallbearers, and Rev. R. C. Scrogum.
Wife & Children.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of Kenneth W. Baker who passed away March 5th, 1944.
Beyond the sunset, Oh glad reunion
With our dear loved one
Who has gone before.
In that fair Homeland
We'll know no parting,
Beyond the sunset forever more.
Sadly missed by his parents, brothers and sisters.

In memory of Howard O. Strawser who passed away six years ago, March 5, 1947.
Today will bring sad memories,
Of our loved one gone to rest,
Who will always be remembered
By those who loved him best.
Sadly missed by his wife & children.

Sudan Plays Prominent Part In Communism's Calculations

Editors Note: Across East Africa, from Cairo to Kenya, the Communists are trying to sow the seeds of chaos. One of the most strategic areas is the Sudan, soon to hold elections which will decide its future. William L. Ryan, the AP's specialist on news of communism, has made a comprehensive survey of the Red campaign. This is the second of three articles by Ryan dealing with the important East African sector in the cold war.

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

AP Foreign News Analyst

KHARTOUM, Sudan, March 4 (AP)—Communism is working day and night to transform earnest nationalism into turmoil and anarchy in this vast, hot expanse of strategic territory.

The Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, big as all Western Europe together, plays a prominent part in world communism's calculations.

So far the Reds have gained a small but important foothold. They have attracted many students and teachers, young people and workers, and lately have turned propaganda guns on the peasantry.

A high - ranking Sudanese says their whole policy is to "promote anarchy and chaos."

Their agents make every effort to muddy the waters in the current surge for self-government, to fan antagonisms between Sudanese and the British, between Sudanese and the Egyptians, between Sudanese and Sudanese.

Many of the people realize their nation could not isolate itself completely from outside help. A substantial number stand for "dominion status" with their northern neighbor, Egypt. Some want similar status with Britain. Others advocate a temporary United Nations sovereignty.

But the Communists are agitating for a program which would cut the Sudan off completely from the outside world and leave the sprawling, half-desert land completely helpless.

To do this, they fan old suspicions, play heavily on the hatred of the very word "imperialism," demand immediate cessation of the condominium, which is the joint rule of Britain and Egypt, and agitate for the immediate withdrawal of both the British and Egyptians. Non-Communists say such a program would lead to a chaotic condition approaching anarchy.

There is good reason to believe the inspiration for the underground Liberation" launched in 1946 came from Communists in Egypt.

On the record there are only 700 proved Communists in all Northern Sudan. But educated guesses are that Communists with their tools and dupes have a strength of 40,000.

The government says:

"Communism is incompatible with Islam (the Moslem religion) and most thinking Sudanese reject it, but its doctrines tend to deceive the have-nots who, in their ignorance, believe a grasping imperialism accounts for the differences in their present standards of living observable between their own now rising circumstances and the standards established and maintained by the Western world only through generations of hard work."

Certainly in this part of the world communism places its accent on youth. A relatively large number of university and secondary students and faculty here and in Egypt openly profess communism and speak the jargon, support Red demonstrations and help foment strikes for Communist political aims.

The grievances of the Northern Sudanese intellectual go deep He considers himself and his fellows fully capable of governing Sudan. Rightly or wrongly, he blames the British most of all for keeping him down.

Another evidence of Moscow interest in the Sudan is the activity of the World Federation of Trade Unions (WFTU), a Communist transmission belt with headquarters in Vienna. There are almost 80 trade unions in the Northern Sudan, despite the lack of any large-scale industry. A federation was formed in 1950, led by the biggest union, the railway workers. Then the Communists moved in, seizing leadership of the federation which claims about 150,000 members.

The Communists apparently finance themselves here from contributions of members and sympathizers and sales of the party newspapers, printed underground.

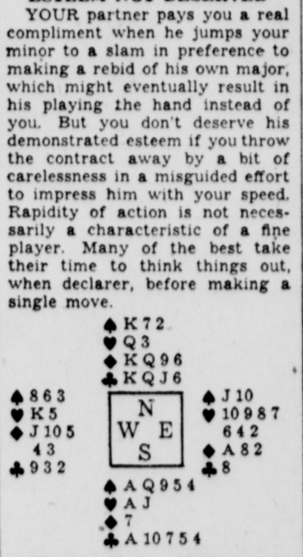
A man who left the Egyptian Communist party told me that in general Moscow and the Cominform try to make a party in an underdeveloped country stand on its own feet. The Cominform wants the local Communist to feel the party belongs to him and that he has a big stake in it.

Daily Bridge Lesson

by Shepard Barclay

ESTEEM NOT DESERVED

YOUR partner pays you a real compliment when he jumps your minor to a slam in preference to making a rebid of his own major, which might eventually result in his playing the hand instead of you. But you don't deserve his demonstrated esteem if you throw the contract away by a bit of carelessness in a misguided effort to impress him with your speed. Rapidity of action is not necessarily a characteristic of a fine player. Many of the best take their time to think things out, when declarer, before making a single move.



(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
1 ♦	1 ♥	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	6 ♣

"Thanks for the compliment" is what North might have said as soon as he saw South's hand. South's correct move on his second turn was a rebid of his spades to show that he surely had at least five of them and not just a four-carder with a whale of a lot of high card strength North could not have let such a bid fail to beget an ultimate small slam in spades. South's leap to the 6-Clubs was based on his confidence that North, a much more experienced player, would surely do a good job of playing, whereas he was none too sure of his own slam-playing talents.

North was all ready to impress his partner as soon as he saw the situation. So, when East led the heart 10, he felt that he would immediately display his quick card-reading. Certain from East's overcall that the K was held by that defender, he played the J from the dummy and was flabbergasted when West unsheathed the K. The diamond J return to the A put him down one to the accompaniment of lavish apologies for his haste.

Wishing to dispel the new-born doubt of his keenness, North then explained to South how he should have played—winning the first trick with the heart A, taking out trumps and then using spades to discard his sole heart loser, possibly ruffing one spade along the way if the suit was divided on a 4-1 basis instead of 3-2.

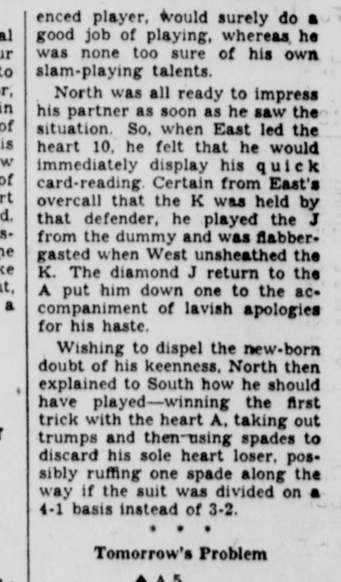
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

If West gets into 6-Spades, with East bidding 3-No Trumps along the way, why should South refrain from doubling it?

Uncertainties Over Stalin Illness Send Stocks Down

NEW YORK, March 4 (AP) — The Stock Market was hard hit today by selling that arose over uncertainties surrounding the illness of Premier Stalin.

Sudan Plays Prominent Part In Communism's Calculations

Editors Note: Across East Africa, from Cairo to Kenya, the Communists are trying to sow the seeds of chaos. One of the most strategic areas is the Sudan, soon to hold elections which will decide its future. William L. Ryan, the AP's specialist on news of communism, has made a comprehensive survey of the Red campaign. This is the second of three articles by Ryan dealing with the important East African sector in the cold war.

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Foreign News Analyst

KHARTOUM, Sudan, March 4 (AP)—Communism is working day and night to transform earnest nationalism into turmoil and anarchy in this vast, hot expanse of strategic territory.

The Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, big as all Western Europe together, plays a prominent part in world communism's calculations.

So far the Reds have gained a small but important foothold. They have attracted many students and teachers, young people and workers, and lately have turned propaganda guns on the peasantry.

A high - ranking Sudanese says their whole policy is to "promote anarchy and chaos."

Their agents make every effort to muddy the waters in the current surge for self-government, to fan antagonisms between Sudanese and the British, between Sudanese and the Egyptians, between Sudanese and Sudanese.

Many of the people realize their nation could not isolate itself completely from outside help. A substantial number stand for "dominion status" with their northern neighbor, Egypt. Some want similar status with Britain. Others advocate a temporary United Nations sovereignty.

But the Communists are agitating for a program which would cut the Sudan off completely from the outside world and leave the sprawling, half-desert land completely helpless.

To do this, they fan old suspicions, play heavily on the hatred of the very word "imperialism," demand immediate cessation of the condominium, which is the joint rule of Britain and Egypt, and agitate for the immediate withdrawal of both the British and Egyptians. Non-Communists say such a program would lead to a chaotic condition approaching anarchy.

There is good reason to believe the inspiration for the underground Liberation" launched in 1946 came from Communists in Egypt.

On the record there are only 700 proved Communists in all Northern Sudan. But educated guesses are that Communists with their tools and dupes have a strength of 40,000.

The government says:

"Communism is incompatible with Islam (the Moslem religion) and most thinking Sudanese reject it, but its doctrines tend to deceive the have-nots who, in their ignorance, believe a grasping imperialism accounts for the differences in their present standards of living observable between their own now rising circumstances and the standards established and maintained by the Western world only through generations of hard work."

Certainly in this part of the world communism places its accent on youth. A relatively large number of university and secondary students and faculty here and in Egypt openly profess communism and speak the jargon, support Red demonstrations and help foment strikes for Communist political aims.

The grievances of the Northern Sudanese intellectual go deep He considers himself and his fellows fully capable of governing Sudan. Rightly or wrongly, he blames the British most of all for keeping him down.

Another evidence of Moscow interest in the Sudan is the activity of the World Federation of Trade Unions (WFTU), a Communist transmission belt with headquarters in Vienna. There are almost 80 trade unions in the Northern Sudan, despite the lack of any large-scale industry. A federation was formed in 1950, led by the biggest union, the railway workers. Then the Communists moved in, seizing leadership of the federation which claims about 150,000 members.

The Communists apparently finance themselves here from contributions of members and sympathizers and sales of the party newspapers, printed underground.

A man who left the Egyptian Communist party told me that in general Moscow and the Cominform try to make a party in an underdeveloped country stand on its own feet. The Cominform wants the local Communist to feel the party belongs to him and that he has a big stake in it.

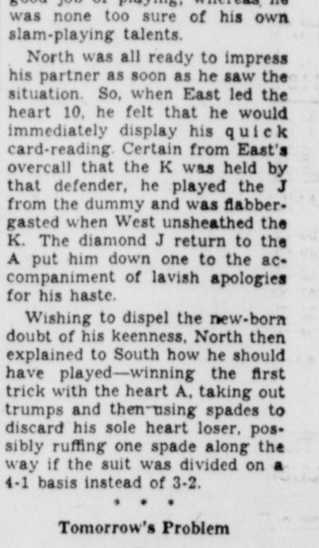
ESTEEM NOT DESERVED

YOUR partner pays you a real compliment when he jumps your minor to a slam in preference to making a rebid of his own major, which might eventually result in his playing the hand instead of you. But you don't deserve his demonstrated esteem if you throw the contract away by a bit of carelessness in a misguided effort to impress him with your speed. Rapidity of action is not necessarily a characteristic of a fine player. Many of the best take their time to think things out, when declarer, before making a single move.



CUMBERLAND GETS NEW INDUSTRY

Airtronic Research To Start Preparing Local Plant Next Week

Production Will Begin Soon, With Employment Goal Of 100

Cumberland's newest industry, Airtronic Research Corporation, will begin work here next week, Joseph E. Butler, president, announced last night following a conference at the Chamber of Commerce office.

W. T. Whelan, the corporation's chief engineer, said groundwork for operations will be laid next week with production to follow as quickly as possible.

The corporation, which has its main office in Washington, D. C., will set up its Cumberland plant at 208 South Mechanic Street, a location occupied until a few days ago by the Kaiser-Frazer garage. Shop superintendent here will be Andrew L. Moore of the Washington plant.

Butler said the plant will begin operations with a minimum of 25 employes. He added that he expects employment to reach the 100 mark by the end of the year.

Vital To Future Defense

"We will be limited only by the experience of the people and the speed with which they can be indoctrinated," said Butler.

He explained that his corporation does original work of a precision nature that is vital to the future defense of this country.

"It is not mobilization work," Butler said, "but work of a long-term research nature." He added that he cannot say specifically the type of work done by his firm.

In addition he said he anticipates production of additional commercial items of a "high precision nature."

Butler could not gve enough credit to the Chamber of Commerce and the local office of the Maryland Employment Service for their co-operation in helping his corporation locate its plant, the second to be put in operation, in this city.

He pointed out that Cumberland was selected as the site for this second plant over five other localities.

"Three weeks ago we had no idea of coming here," Butler elaborated, but "we were pressed for commitments and presented our position to the Chamber of Commerce through Mr. Hargreaves (Albert H. Hargreaves, director of industrial development for the Chamber of Commerce).

"We told him that if he could produce the people and the facilities in a certain time we would come in. The results have far exceeded our expectations."

Butler went on to extend appreciation to the Cumberland office of the Maryland Employment Service for "their splendid co-operation" and to thank the people of Cumberland for their assistance. Without all of this co-operation, he said, "we wouldn't have located here."

The industry is the first to decide to locate in Cumberland since local businesses raised a fund of $160,000 for the purpose of attracting new industry to this community. Hargreaves, who was selected to head the industrial development program, was unable to be present for the announcement last night of his first success since he was out of the city in pursuance of another prospect.

Hopes For More Successes

Anthony Saeli, manager of the Chamber of Commerce, said after Butler's announcement that he hopes the decision of the corporation to locate here justifies the confidence of local business people whose financial support made pos-

Use Lie Detector For Second Time

Lie detector tests have popped up again in the baffling Meister murder case, but State's Attorney Paul M. Fletcher yesterday refused to comment.

Newsmen learned from reliable sources that Thomas C. Meister, husband of the murdered woman, had voluntarily gone to Delaware some ten days ago for a second polygraph examination.

Earlier in the case, on January 18, two days after his wife's body was found, Meister had undergone similar tests in a local hotel.

At that time, Fletcher said a West Virginia lie detector expert had said that the tests showed Meister had no guilty knowledge of the crime.

It was understood that the Delaware tests also gave Meister a clean bill of health, but Fletcher told a reporter: "You may quote me as saying 'No comment.'"

Investigators still are conducting a round-the-clock probe to find out who killed Mrs. Odessa Frances Meister and why. The 35-year-old housewife was not seen from the time she left the Meisters' Columbia Street apartment on December 20 until her bludgeoned body was found on McNamee's Hill January 16.

More Winter Expected In Area Today

Telephone Service, Power Are Restored

Another taste of winter is forecast for the area today following the break in the weather yesterday when rising temperatures saw highway travel get back to normal and curtailed telephone service and electric power restored.

The mercury climbed to 60 here yesterday afternoon but the weatherman says it will be cloudy, windy and colder today with snow flurries in the Alleghenies.

G. Bates Chaires, district engineer of the State Roads Commission said last night that highways of Allegany County were clear. Up in Garrett County however, chains were urged as an inch of snow covered the highways last night.

Telephone service, according to Richard E. Harman, manager of the local central office of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, has been restored to normal although a few customers may be without service in the Finzel Road section.

Yesterday afternoon service had been restored in Garrett County where trouble developed Tuesday when ice snapped lines from Oakland to Friendsville. About 3 p. m. yesterday Potomac Edison crews had power restored to normal west of Frostburg along Route 40 and in the Finzel Road section as well as Deep Creek Lake area.

The two-day ice and sleet storm caused interruption of power in nearby LaVale, Corriganville and in the vicinity of Irons Mountain and service in those sections was back to normal yesterday according to a PE spokesman.

Yesterday the mercury climbed to 60 degrees here and the lowest temperature recorded was 32 degrees, according to the official weather station in Constitution Park.

During the past two days a total of 1.15 inches of rain fell in Cumberland.

Group Gives Full Approval To Bill For More Schools

The Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce last night unanimously passed a resolution endorsing the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Parkway from Hancock to Cumberland at a dinner meeting at Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club.

The motion made by C. William Gilchrist was passed with no negative votes. The resolution follows:

"Whereas the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce believes that the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Parkway will aid the city of Cumberland to again fulfill its historic role as 'gateway to the west', will provide recreational facilities which are not now available to the people, will provide an all-weather controlled access highway through the mountains of Western Maryland and will make available an area of unsurpassed scenic beauty.

"Now, therefore, be it resolved that the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce endorses and recommends the construction of the proposed Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Parkway."

The Jaycees last night also adopted a resolution which endorsed the proposed $5,985,000 Allegany County School Construction Program.

The motion made by Joseph E. Pellerzi, chairman of the education committee, was also unanimously approved.

Earl E. Smith, chairman of the YMCA-Jaycee Basketball Tournament committee, reported names of volunteers for the event to be held March 16 to 19.

Also at the meeting, Lewyn C. Davis, supervisor of junior high schools in the county, gave a talk on the early history of Western Maryland.

30 County Boys To Attend YMCA Youth Program

Will Participate In Model Legislature

This year 30 Allegany County boys will participate in the YMCA Model Youth and Government Program, conducted annually at College Park and Annapolis by the YMCA's of Maryland.

Allegany County will be represented by delegates from Allegany, Fort Hill and Bruce High Schools, and for the first time, by delegates from Beall High School, Frostburg.

Twenty-three of the boys will serve as members of the House of Delegates, and seven will serve in the State Senate.

The per-legislative conference for the 1953 Model Leislature will be held at the University of Maryland at College Park on Saturday. The session will open with a brief meditation in the new University Chapel, directed by the University chaplain.

During the first business session, John M. Gornall, Cumberland Boy Governor for 1952, now a student at the University of Maryland, will preside. At this session, Dr. Harry Byrd, University of Maryland president, will officially open the Legislature and welcome the delegates.

High lighting the program, will be the presentations by the candidates for office. Cumberland candidates this year include:

Carl Slemmer, Allegany High School Senior, candidate for Governor; Dean Hancox, Allegany High School Student, candidate for Clerk of the Senate; and Kenneth McGraw, president of the Allegany Hi-Y Club, candidate for Clerk of the House of Delegates. Following the luncheon session, delegates will cast their vote using the preferential ballot.

Study Government

The afternoon session will be devoted to meetings of state-wide committees on such important phases of state government as transportation, education, finance, public welfare, conservation, and labor and industry. Representatives of the State Government of the State of Maryland will serve as resource leaders for the boys during the Committee sessions.

Shortly before adjourning, Atlee C. Kepler, dean of Hagerstown Junior College and chairman of Elections Committee, will introduce the officers of the 1953 Model Legislature. These boys will conduct a three-day session of legislations at the State Capital in Annapolis, April 23, 24 and 25.

The YMCA Model Legislature is a project of a state-wide committee, of which Dr. Earle T. Hawkins, president of Towson State Teachers College, is the chairman.

Weather

Mercury leaped up to 60 degrees yesterday afternoon, but it dropped as rapidly as it had climbed. Snow and ice was gone yesterday in Cumberland following a two-day downpour of freezing rain. Rain began briefly yesterday evening spilling about .25 of an inch over the area, making 1.15 inches for a two-day period. Observers watched a cold mass of air moving east from Canada last night and predicted a possible two-day cold spell. The Weather Bureau predicts partly cloudy, windy and colder today with snow flurries. High temperature yesterday was 60 according to Constitution Park weather station; low was 32 and at 8 p. m. thermometers stood at 37.

Water May Be Cloudy Today

Water in some sections of the city may be cloudy today because of a failure last night in the bottom of the clear well at the city's Lake Gordon filter plant.

Mayor Roy W. Eves said the water will be re-routed through two normally unused lines, and may show some turbidity for awhile. He said there is no cause for alarm, because the normal chlorination and filtration processes are being used.

Shotgun Blast Fired At Local Housewife

Escapes Harm; LaVale Man Held

An angry former neighbor yesterday chased a terrified housewife from her Bellevue Street home and fired a blast from a shotgun past her ear.

City Police said Mrs. Helen Roberts, 36, of 9 Bellevue Street, narrowly escaped death when pellets from a 20-gauge shotgun whistled past her head outside her home at 2:15 p.m.

Her assailant was identified as Raymond H. Jones, about 35, of LaVale. Jones was being held in City Jail last night for action of the State's Attorney.

Officers Walter P. Crabtree and W. Carl Stouffer said they were sent to the Roberts home after an excited woman called Police Headquarters to report there had been a shooting.

The officers said they found Jones standing on the sidewalk as they pulled up to the house in their patrol wagon. He was holding a bolt-action repeating shotgun at his hip.

Crabtree and Stouffer asked Jones what had happened. They quoted him as saying: "I just tool a shot at a woman and I meant to hit her."

The policemen walked slowly up to Jones, their pistols holstered, and took the gun away from him. It was cocked and loaded, but the officers said he offered no resistance.

Officers John Henry Stitcher and Louis P. Downey, who investigated later, said Mrs. Roberts told them she had been alone in her home, doing the family washing, when Jones walked in.

She saw the gun and ran out the back door. As she started up a neighbor's porch steps, Mrs. Roberts said, Jones levelled the gun and fired, at point-blank range.

Part of the wadding in the shell apparently struck Mrs. Roberts' ear, Stitcher and Downey said, but the skin was not broken and she did not require medical attention.

Police said Jones had blamed Mrs. Roberts for his domestic difficulties. They said the Jones family had lived on Bellevue Street for about two years and had been acquainted with Mrs. Roberts during that time, but that Jones did not elaborate on his problems.

County Investigator Edwin R. Lilya said Jones would be questioned in the office of State's Attorney Paul M. Fletcher this morning. No charge had been filed against him last night.

Fire Sweeps Residence On Valley Street

Two families were routed from their Valley Street home early yesterday morning when fire gutted a kitchen and dining room and threatened the rest of the house.

No one was injured, but the two rooms and their furnishings were described as a near-total loss.

The blaze started at about 4:30 a. m. in the kitchen of Mr. and Mrs. George Shaffer at 425 Valley Street. Firemen said a kerosene cookstove was responsible.

Assistant Fire Chief Alvey B. Poole reported that Shaffer said his two sons, age three and five, apparently got up during the night and experimented with the stove.

Flames gushed out of the stove, spread through the kitchen and stairway and routed the Shaffers and Mr. and Mrs. Mathew W. Blacker and their two children.

Holes In Ground Help Make Jobs, Walsh Declares

Says Stripping Ruffles "Aesthetic Feelings"

ANNAPOLIS, March 4 (AP)—Holes in the ground may ruffle "aesthetic feelings" but in Western Maryland they're a necessary part of a business that creates jobs.

Former Judge William C. Walsh so described strip mining for the Senate Judiciary Committee today.

Walsh represented coal producers opposing a bill by Minority Leader Kimble (R-Allegany) to require strip miners to refill the cuts they dig into land to bring out coal and clay.

Kimble said this would "restore a very unsightly condition to respectable shape and possible save a human life."

The senator said children had drowned in abandoned pits, but Walsh insisted no lives had been lost in surface mining excavations.

Walsh said a stripping operation within sight of the Frostburg State Teachers College had stirred up much of the howl over holes in the ground.

"Apparently it disturbs the aesthetic feelings of the students and teachers," he said.

Walsh also attributed support for the bill to persons who "want to go out in their car on a Sunday afternoon and see everything lovely."

Actually, he told the committee, most of the few operations now under way in Allegany and Garrett Counties are "back in the wilderness and bother no one."

He said strip mining foes ignore the jobs it creates and the good it does in an area which has been tormented by unemployment.

Similar legislation was passed several years ago but the Court of Appeals held it unconstitutional because Garrett County was exempted. Sen. Fraley (R-Garrett) didn't announce his position on Kimble's bill, but he has been against such efforts in the past and questioned the Allegany senator closely today.

Kimble read letters backing his proposal from the Allegany County commissioners and the State Water Pollution Control Commission.

There to oppose it, besides Walsh were Stephen Pagenhardt, Oakland attorney and strip miner: William S. Jenkins, president of Maryland Coal and Realty Co.: Joseph H. Cruzon, president of Big Savage Refractories, and W. Earle Cobey, Cumberland attorney.

Enter Cresaptown Bill

The Allegany County Delegation yesterday introduced a bill which would give the Cresaptown Improvement Association authority to borrow $25,000 for expanding its water system.

Delegate Charles M. See, chairman of the Delegation, said the funds would be used to extend existing water lines and to install new fire hydrants.

Funds borrowed would be repaid by revenues from the sale of water.

Delegate See said Earl E. Manges, who presented the bill for the Cresaptown group, reported the new water lines and hydrants will result in a reduction of about 20 per cent in fire insurance rates in the new area.

Meet With Sportsmen

A delegation of sportsmen from Allegany County, headed by Joseph A. Minke, regional game warden, went to Annapolis yesterday to confer with the Allegany County legislators.

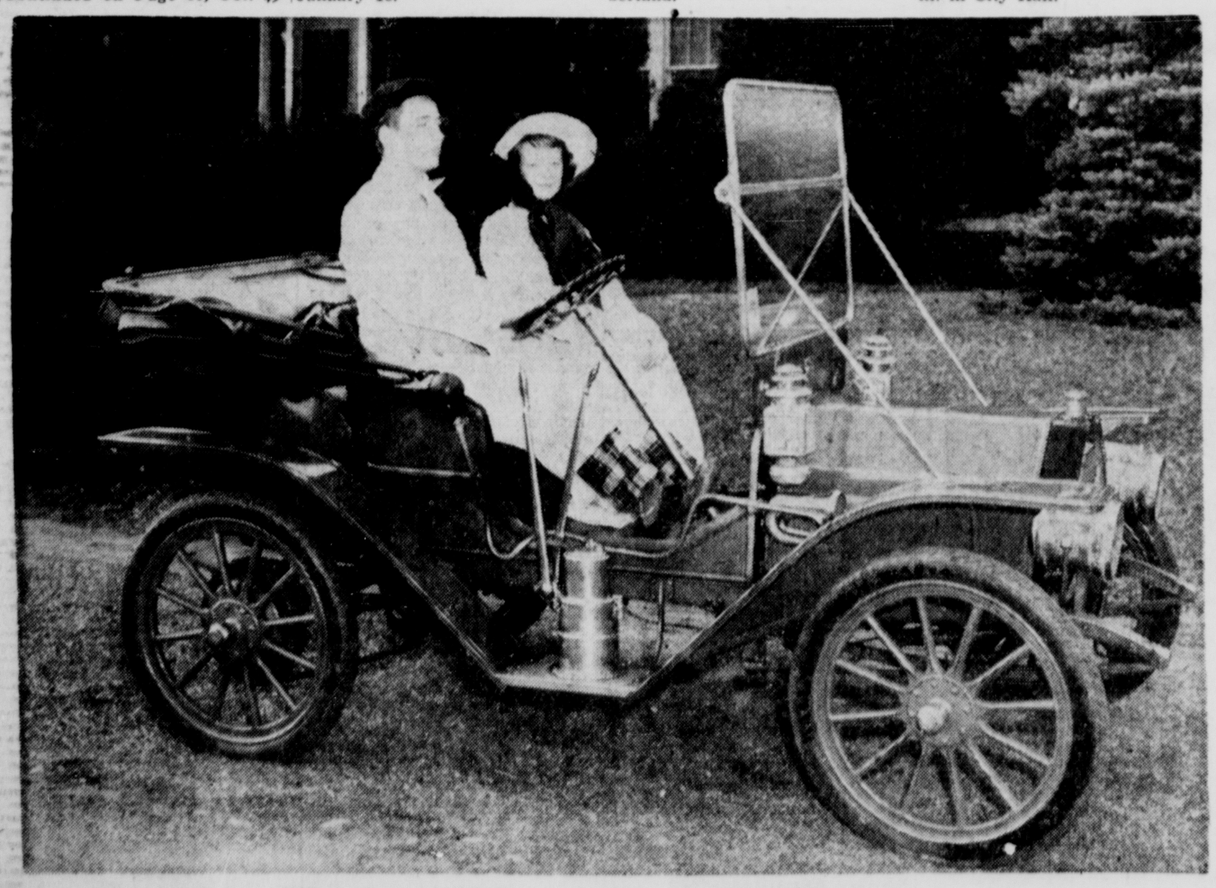
To Aid Small Firms

The Allegany County industrial expansion bill which will become effective on June 1 will prove an aid to the expansion of both small and large industries, Delegate Horace P. Whitworth, Jr., reported yesterday.

He said the bill was amended to provide 10 year tax exemptions for all expansions and additions to local industries which are assessed at more than $10,000. Except for the first $10,000, it offers the same help to established industries which wish to expand as is offered new firms which locate in Allegany County.

Must Hold Fines

House Bill 325, sponsored by Delegates See, Kelley and Driscoll, passed the House yesterday. It provides that in appeals to the Circuit Courts, fines levied by trial magistrates shall be held by court clerks to expedite reimbursement to persons acquitted.



Featured In Minstrelks Show

Kenneth McGraw and Nancy Wilson, singing stars of Allegany High School's recent hit, "The Chocolate Soldier," will be featured in the Minstrelks March 16 and 17 at the Maryland Theatre. The duet will open the show with the original song, "Without Reason," which is the theme of this year's show. Featured in the scene will be a 1905 red Buick Roadster, on Kelly-Springfield tires, owned by Earl Leep, Hyndman, Pa., who won an award in a competition of ancient cars during the annual Glidden Tour. The two singers will be surrounded with lines of beautiful dancing chorines, Gibson girls, gay blades and a large choral ensemble. Janet Myerly is assisting with the choreography and a variety of precision boogie woogie, tiller and character dancing is planned.

CUMBERLAND GETS NEW INDUSTRY

Airtronic Research To Start Preparing Local Plant Next Week

Production Will Begin Soon, With Employment Goal Of 100

Cumberland's newest industry, Airtronic Research Corporation, will begin work here next week, Joseph E. Butler, president, announced last night following a conference at the Chamber of Commerce office.

W. T. Whelan, the corporation's chief engineer, said groundwork for operations will be laid next week with production to follow as quickly as possible.

The corporation, which has its main office in Washington, D. C., will set up its Cumberland plant at 208 South Mechanic Street, a location occupied until a few days ago by the Kaiser-Frazer garage. Shop superintendent here will be Andrew L. Moore of the Washington plant.

Butler said the plant will begin operations with a minimum of 25 employes. He added that he expects employment to reach the 100 mark by the end of the year.

Vital To Future Defense

"We will be limited only by the experience of the people and the speed with which they can be indoctrinated," said Butler.

He explained that his corporation does original work of a precision nature that is vital to the future defense of this country.

"It is not mobilization work," Butler said, "but work of a long-term research nature." He added that he cannot say specifically the type of work done by his firm.

In addition he said he anticipates production of additional commercial items of a "high precision nature."

Butler could not gve enough credit to the Chamber of Commerce and the local office of the Maryland Employment Service for their co-operation in helping his corporation locate its plant, the second to be put in operation, in this city.

He pointed out that Cumberland was selected as the site for this second plant over five other localities.

"Three weeks ago we had no idea of coming here," Butler elaborated, but "we were pressed for commitments and presented our position to the Chamber of Commerce through Mr. Hargreaves (Albert H. Hargreaves, director of industrial development for the Chamber of Commerce).

"We told him that if he could produce the people and the facilities in a certain time we would come in. The results have far exceeded our expectations."

Butler went on to extend appreciation to the Cumberland office of the Maryland Employment Service for "their splendid co-operation" and to thank the people of Cumberland for their assistance. Without all of this co-operation, he said, "we wouldn't have located here."

The industry is the first to decide to locate in Cumberland since local businesses raised a fund of $160,000 for the purpose of attracting new industry to this community. Hargreaves, who was selected to head the industrial development program, was unable to be present for the announcement last night of his first success since he was out of the city in pursuance of another prospect.

Hopes For More Successes

Anthony Saeli, manager of the Chamber of Commerce, said after Butler's announcement that he hopes the decision of the corporation to locate here justifies the confidence of local business people whose financial support made pos-

Use Lie Detector For Second Time

Lie detector tests have popped up again in the baffling Meister murder case, but State's Attorney Paul M. Fletcher yesterday refused to comment.

Newsmen learned from reliable sources that Thomas C. Meister, husband of the murdered woman, had voluntarily gone to Delaware some ten days ago for a second polygraph examination.

Earlier in the case, on January 18, two days after his wife's body was found, Meister had undergone similar tests in a local hotel.

At that time, Fletcher said a West Virginia lie detector expert had said that the tests showed Meister had no guilty knowledge of the crime.

It was understood that the Delaware tests also gave Meister a clean bill of health, but Fletcher told a reporter: "You may quote me as saying 'No comment.'"

Investigators still are conducting a round-the-clock probe to find out who killed Mrs. Odessa Frances Meister and why. The 35-year-old housewife was not seen from the time she left the Meisters' Columbia Street apartment on December 20 until her bludgeoned body was found on McNamee's Hill January 16.

More Winter Expected In Area Today

Telephone Service, Power Are Restored

Another taste of winter is forecast for the area today following the break in the weather yesterday when rising temperatures saw highway travel get back to normal and curtailed telephone service and electric power restored.

The mercury climbed to 60 here yesterday afternoon but the weatherman says it will be cloudy, windy and colder today with snow flurries in the Alleghenies.

G. Bates Chaires, district engineer of the State Roads Commission said last night that highways of Allegany County were clear. Up in Garrett County however, chains were urged as an inch of snow covered the highways last night.

Telephone service, according to Richard E. Harman, manager of the local central office of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, has been restored to normal although a few customers may be without service in the Finzel Road section.

Yesterday afternoon service had been restored in Garrett County where trouble developed Tuesday when ice snapped lines from Oakland to Friendsville. About 3 p. m. yesterday Potomac Edison crews had power restored to normal west of Frostburg along Route 40 and in the Finzel Road section as well as Deep Creek Lake area.

The two-day ice and sleet storm caused interruption of power in nearby LaVale, Corriganville and in the vicinity of Irons Mountain and service in those sections was back to normal yesterday according to a PE spokesman.

Yesterday the mercury climbed to 60 degrees here and the lowest temperature recorded was 32 degrees, according to the official weather station in Constitution Park.

During the past two days a total of 1.15 inches of rain fell in Cumberland.

When a definite plan and cost estimate is secured, See said, the item will be included in the Capital Bond Improvement Bill for 1954.

The Lonaconing delegation, consisting of Felix Foote, Edward McPartland, Rev. Joseph Young, Arthur Phillips and Ervin Lewis, went to Annapolis to ask that State funds be allotted.

They were told, See explained, that no funds were available at present but that the project could be included in the 1954 program.

Group Gives Full Approval To Bill For More Schools

The Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce last night unanimously passed a resolution endorsing the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Parkway from Hancock to Cumberland at a dinner meeting at Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club.

The motion made by C. William Gilchrist was passed with no negative votes. The resolution follows:

"Whereas the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce believes that the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Parkway will aid the city of Cumberland to again fulfill its historic role as 'gateway to the west', will provide recreational facilities which are not now available to the people, will provide an all-weather controlled access highway through the mountains of Western Maryland and will make available an area of unsurpassed scenic beauty.

"Now, therefore, be it resolved that the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce endorses and recommends the construction of the proposed Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Parkway."

The Jaycees last night also adopted a resolution which endorsed the proposed $5,985,000 Allegany County School Construction Program.

The motion made by Joseph E. Pellerzi, chairman of the education committee, was also unanimously approved.

Earl E. Smith, chairman of the YMCA-Jaycee Basketball Tournament committee, reported names of volunteers for the event to be held March 16 to 19.

Also at the meeting, Lewyn C. Davis, supervisor of junior high schools in the county, gave a talk on the early history of Western Maryland.

Water May Be Cloudy Today

Water in some sections of the city may be cloudy today because of a failure last night in the bottom of the clear well at the city's Lake Gordon filter plant.

Mayor Roy W. Eves said the water will be re-routed through two normally unused lines, and may show some turbidity for awhile. He said there is no cause for alarm, because the normal chlorination and filtration processes are being used.

Clinics Are Planned

Child Hygiene clinics will be held today at 10 a. m. in Corriganville and tomorrow at 10 a. m. in Bowman's Addition and Mt. Savage. A chest clinic, by appointment, will be held Friday in City Hall.

Shotgun Blast Fired At Local Housewife

Escapes Harm; LaVale Man Held

An angry former neighbor yesterday chased a terrified housewife from her Bellevue Street home and fired a blast from a shotgun past her ear.

City Police said Mrs. Helen Roberts, 36, of 9 Bellevue Street, narrowly escaped death when pellets from a 20-gauge shotgun whistled past her head outside her home at 2:15 p.m.

Her assailant was identified as Raymond H. Jones, about 35, of LaVale. Jones was being held in City Jail last night for action of the State's Attorney.

Officers Walter P. Crabtree and W. Carl Stouffer said they were sent to the Roberts home after an excited woman called Police Headquarters to report there had been a shooting.

The officers said they found Jones standing on the sidewalk as they pulled up to the house in their patrol wagon. He was holding a bolt-action repeating shotgun at his hip.

Crabtree and Stouffer asked Jones what had happened. They quoted him as saying: "I just took a shot at a woman and I meant to hit her."

The policemen walked slowly up to Jones, their pistols holstered, and took the gun away from him. It was cocked and loaded, but the officers said he offered no resistance.

Officers John Henry Stitcher and Louis P. Downey, who investigated later, said Mrs. Roberts told them she had been alone in her home, doing the family washing, when Jones walked in.

She saw the gun and ran out the back door. As she started up a neighbor's porch steps, Mrs. Roberts said, Jones levelled the gun and fired, at point-blank range.

Part of the wadding in the shell apparently struck Mrs. Roberts' ear, Stitcher and Downey said, but the skin was not broken and she did not require medical attention.

Police said Jones had blamed Mrs. Roberts for his domestic difficulties. They said the Jones family had lived on Bellevue Street for about two years and had been acquainted with Mrs. Roberts during that time, but that Jones did not elaborate on his problems.

County Investigator Edwin R. Lilya said Jones would be questioned in the office of State's Attorney Paul M. Fletcher this morning. No charge had been filed against him last night.

Fire Sweeps Residence On Valley Street

Two families were routed from their Valley Street home early yesterday morning when fire gutted a kitchen and dining room and threatened the rest of the house.

No one was injured, but the two rooms and their furnishings were described as a near-total loss.

The blaze started at about 4:30 a. m. in the kitchen of Mr. and Mrs. George Shaffer at 425 Valley Street. Firemen said a kerosene cookstove was responsible.

Assistant Fire Chief Alvey B. Poole reported that Shaffer said his two sons, age three and five, apparently got up during the night and experimented with the stove.

Flames gushed out of the stove, spread through the kitchen and stairway and routed the Shaffers and Mr. and Mrs. Mathew W. Blacker and their two children.

East Side and Central fire companies quickly brought the blaze under control and managed to confine it to the rear of the first-floor.

Holes In Ground Help Make Jobs, Walsh Declares

Says Stripping Ruffles "Aesthetic Feelings"

ANNAPOLIS, March 4 (AP)—Holes in the ground may ruffle "aesthetic feelings" but in Western Maryland they're a necessary part of a business that creates jobs.

Former Judge William C. Walsh so described strip mining for the Senate Judiciary Committee today.

Walsh represented coal producers opposing a bill by Minority Leader Kimble (R-Allegany) to require strip miners to refill the cuts they dig into land to bring out coal and clay.

Kimble said this would "restore a very unsightly condition to respectable shape and possible save a human life."

The senator said children had drowned in abandoned pits, but Walsh insisted no lives had been lost in surface mining excavations.

Walsh said a stripping operation within sight of the Frostburg State Teachers College had stirred up much of the howl over holes in the ground.

"Apparently it disturbs the aesthetic feelings of the students and teachers," he said.

Walsh also attributed support for the bill to persons who "want to go out in their car on a Sunday afternoon and see everything lovely."

Actually, he told the committee, most of the few operations now under way in Allegany and Garrett Counties are "back in the wilderness and bother no one."

He said strip mining foes ignore the jobs it creates and the good it does in an area which has been tormented by unemployment.

Similar legislation was passed several years ago but the Court of Appeals held it unconstitutional because Garrett County was exempted. Sen. Fraley (R-Garrett) didn't announce his position on Kimble's bill, but he has been against such efforts in the past and questioned the Allegany senator closely today.

Kimble read letters backing his proposal from the Allegany County commissioners and the State Water Pollution Control Commission.

There to oppose it, besides Walsh were Stephen Pagenhardt, Oakland attorney and strip miner: William S. Jenkins, president of Maryland Coal and Realty Co.: Joseph H. Cruzon, president of Big Savage Refractories, and W. Earle Cobey, Cumberland attorney.

Enter Cresaptown Bill

The Allegany County Delegation yesterday introduced a bill which would give the Cresaptown Improvement Association authority to borrow $25,000 for expanding its water system.

Delegate Charles M. See, chairman of the Delegation, said the funds would be used to extend existing water lines and to install new fire hydrants.

Funds borrowed would be repaid by revenues from the sale of water.

Delegate See said Earl E. Manges, who presented the bill for the Cresaptown group, reported the new water lines and hydrants will result in a reduction of about 20 per cent in fire insurance rates in the new area.

Meet With Sportsmen

A delegation of sportsmen from Allegany County, headed by Joseph A. Minke, regional game warden, went to Annapolis yesterday to confer with the Allegany County legislators.

To Aid Small Firms

The Allegany County industrial expansion bill which will become effective on June 1 will prove an aid to the expansion of both small and large industries, Delegate Horace P. Whitworth, Jr., reported yesterday.

He said the bill was amended to provide 10 year tax exemptions for all expansions and additions to local industries which are assessed at more than $10,000. Except for the first $10,000, it offers the same help to established industries which wish to expand as is offered new firms which locate in Allegany County.

Must Hold Fines

House Bill 325, sponsored by Delegates See, Kelley and Driscoll, passed the House yesterday. It provides that in appeals to the Circuit Courts, fines levied by trial magistrates shall be held by court clerks to expedite reimbursement to persons acquitted.

Kenneth McGraw and Nancy Wilson, singing stars of Allegany High School's recent hit, "The Chocolate Soldier," will be featured in the Minstrelks March 16 and 17 at the Maryland Theatre. 27-Year-Old Rawlings Man Shot By Neighbor

Fred Gutherie In Critical Condition

A 27-year-old father was shot and critically wounded by a neighbor early last night while his wife was in the office of a magistrate, obtaining an assault warrant against him.

The victim, Fred Guthrie of near Rawlings, was in "fair" condition at Memorial Hospital with a bullet wound through the chest.

His next-door neighbor, Junior O'Haver, 30, was being held for questioning in the office of State's Attorney Paul M. Fletcher.

Authorities said the shooting took place at about 7 p. m. at the O'Haver home off U. S. 220 in the Fort Hill section two miles south of Rawlings.

Ten miles away, at the office of Trial Magistrate William Meagher at Cresaptown, Guthrie's wife, Viola, was swearing out a warrant for his arrest.

Family Quarrel

Mrs. Guthrie told authorities that her husband had assaulted her during a quarrel at about 5 p. m. She said he also had threatened her father, William Steele, who lives behind the Guthrie home.

State Trooper First Class A. M. Spioch was taking Mrs. Guthrie from Meagher's office to her home to serve the warrant when word of the shooting came over the police radio at 7:15 p. m.

Telephoned Police

Half an hour later, while Spioch and Trooper First Class William F. Baker were at the scene investigating, O'Haver telephoned the LaVale State Police barracks to give himself up.

Police quoted him as saying that he had "just shot Mrs. Fred Guthrie" and that he would wait at the gas station until police arrived.

Lt. W. E. O'Hara, barracks commander, went to the scene and took O'Haver into custody without incident.

After questioning O'Haver last night, Fletcher gave this account of the shooting:

Mrs. Guthrie had left the home following a quarrel with her husband, and had gone to get a warrant for his arrest.

Guthrie took his two - year - old daughter next door to the O'Haver home and asked the O'Havers to watch her for awhile.

Argued and Fought

A short time later, he returned to pick up his child. O'Haver told Fletcher he accused Guthrie of having thrown a stone against the side of his house during the afternoon.

Guthrie denied the accusation and the argument which ensued developed into a fight.

During the tussel, O'Haver said, he picked up his .32 caliber automatic pistol and warned Guthrie to keep away from him.

Ran From House

The wounded man grabbed his daughter and went to the home of a neighbor, where he collapsed while a member of the family went for aid. Then he went to another home in the area, and finally returned to his own house, where police found him when they arrived.

The George Funeral Home ambulance took Guthrie to the local hospital, where he was admitted immediately. In addition to the bullet wound, he had a black eye and contusions of the face, but no fractures or other serious injuries.

Fletcher said O'Haver would be held in County Jail overnight, but that no charge would be filed immediately, pending further investigation.

City Planning Armed Forces Day Activities

Event To Be Held May 16 At Ft. Hill

Cumberland has again this year been designated as one of the cities in the United States in which a major effort will be made in observing Armed Forces Day on May 16.

Mayor Roy W. Eves has appointed Thomas F. Conlon as chairman of the local event. Lt. Commander W. E. Woodson, Jr., instructor-inspector of the local Navy Reserve Units, will be service project officer.

Organizations Invited

Letters have been sent out to all veteran and fraternal organizations and other groups inviting them to participate in the program.

Conlon has invited representatives from all local organizations to attend a meeting Monday, March 23 at 8 p. m. in the postmaster's office, Post Office Building. Purpose of the meeting is to select a committee and formulate plans for the event.

Conlon said yesterday there will be no parade this year as in the past, but a program will be planned to be executed in the Fort Hill High School Stadium.

Plan Demonstrations

A tentative outline of the program, according to Conlon, calls for a number of demonstrations by local military units at the stadium.

The list includes 30-minute demonstrations by the Navy and Marine units followed by an address by a guest speaker.

Following the main address there will be exhibitions by the local National Guard units and the Organized Army Reserve Corps. The Fort Hill High School Band will provide music for the event.

Conlon said Mayor Eves plans to send invitations to mayors and councilmen and other officials of surrounding communities. The public is also invited to witness the observance ceremonies.

Following the stadium events, local veteran organizations and other clubs will hold open houses.

Baptismal Service Planned For Sunday

A full - scale baptismal service will be held at the LaVale Baptist Church Sunday at 7:30 p. m. at which time about 35 candidates will be baptized by immersion.

This will be the first baptismal service of its kind ever held in any LaVale Church. A new baptismal pool has just recently been installed in the relatively new church located on route 40, at Allegany Grove.

Rev. C. F. Frith, pastor, will officiate in the service, assisted by baptismal committee.

News In Brief

Clifford B. Sisler Post 9451, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Oldtown, will hold a ham shooting match Sunday on the club house grounds along Uhl Highway.

Brother G. Nicholas, F.S.C., instructor at LaSalle High School, will speak to the Tri State Traffic Club next Wednesday at 6:30 p. m. His subject will be "Scientific Aspects of Cave Exploring".

Remodeled Baltimore Street Building To Open Monday

A modern, remodeled store building will be opened Monday on Baltimore Street on the site of a disastrous fire February 3, 1952.

It is No. 57-59 Baltimore Street which has been rebuilt by B. K. Lazarus and Mark L. Lazarus Sr.

The first floor of 57 Baltimore Street is being negotiated for by a firm not identified while the first floor of 59 Baltimore Street will be occupied by Webb's Shoe Store.

Half of the second floor over Webb's is being made into a millinery department and alterations room for Lazarus, Inc., women's apparel store, 55 Baltimore Street. Steps will lead from the second floor of Lazarus to these quarters.

The entire third floor of the remodeled building will also be connected with the third floor of the Lazarus store.

For the time being it will be used as an auditorium that will be available for public events, Mark L. Lazarus explained.

In connection with the opening of the new millinery department and Webb's Shoe Store, Lazarus will present a style show Monday at 12:15 p. m. and 6 p. m.

Both levels of the third floor, including the Fountain Room, will be equipped with tables and chairs for the style show viewers.

The second floor Lazarus quarters in the remodeled building measures 20 by 90 feet with the millinery department measuring 20 by 70 feet and the new alterations room, 20 by 20 feet.

The decoration scheme includes white shantung drapes, grass cloth and sky blue, coral, pink, blue green paints.

The John I. Vandergrift Company has the contract for remodeling and rebuilding the burned structure.

Sub-contractors are J. C. Powell, Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company; George C. Jones, painting contractor, and Queen City Electric Company.

At the same time, the John I. Vandergrift Company is making repairs and alterations to the front of the Lazarus Building.

The high scaffolds that are the subject of the sidewalk superintendent's attention on the Main Stem these days were erected to get to some loose brick at the top of the structure.

The brick will be pointed up and woodwork will be painted, the Lazarus brothers explained.

The interior was designed by Morris Lapidus, New York architect-designer.

Md. University May Relax Rule On Registration

Entrance Exams May Be Waived

BALTIMORE, March 5 (AP)—The University of Maryland may open its doors to all graduates of Maryland public high schools without entrance test requirements, President H. C. Byrd said today.

At present, Byrd said, only 48 to 52 per cent of the state's high school graduates are considered for admission to the university. Entrance tests are required in borderline cases.

Byrd said "resentment," "pressure" and "general bad feeling" on the part of parents may force a relaxation of present entrance requirements.

"The parents want to know," he added, "whether our standards are too high or the high school standards are too low."

The practice of admitting all high school graduates is common in other state universities, Byrd said.

As a practical matter, he continued, such a policy would mean only that low-caliber students would meet scholastic obstacles later in their university careers rather than at the start. Many probably would fail, thus keeping classes at about their present size.

"The point to be gained," Byrd added, "is that everyone would be given an opportunity to show what he or she can do."

Woman Pleads For Trial On Extortion Count

Mrs. Files Waives Grand Jury Action

Mrs. Ida Viola Files, 33 Race Street, who has been bound over to the Allegany County Circuit Court grand jury on an extortion charge, yesterday filed a petition in Circuit Court waiving indictment by the grand jury and asking for an immediate trial.

State's Attorney Paul M. Fletcher last month charged Mrs. Files with a "felonious attempt to extort money by accusing a person of a crime of an indictable nature."

Clarence Shutter, Mrs. Files' attorney, who filed the petition for Mrs. Files, requested she be tried by the court on a criminal information to be filed by the State's Attorney. Mrs. Files has been free on bond since February 13.

Mrs. Files is accused of trying to extort $500 from Morton W. Peskin, local business man. She implied that she would implicate him in the case of Mrs. Odessa Frances Meister, housewife and Celanese worker, whose battered body was found January 16.

At the time he held a press conference to announce the arrest of Mrs. Files, Fletcher said:

"At no time has the name of this man entered into the Meister investigation — as a suspect or otherwise."

City Delegation Will Meet Ohio Horesman Today

Cumberland city officials and representatives from the Chamber of Commerce will meet the Ohio horseman who is scheduled to stop here this afternoon on his historic ride from Chillicothe, Ohio to Washington in observance of the State of Ohio's sesquicentennial.

The courier will be met at The Narrows about 4 p. m. by Mayor Roy W. Eves and Mrs. Eves who is a native of Chillicothe. Mayor and Mrs. Eves resided there for four years early in the mayor's railroad career.

Severance Tax Killed By W. Va. House

Maneuver Drops Bill For Year

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 5 (AP)—The West Virginia House handed a final killing blow to Gov. Marland's severance tax proposal today, with 24 Democrats joining the Republican minority in a 56-41 vote against the bill.

Technically, the vote was on a motion by Del. Gosorn (D-Kanawha) to postpone consideration of the measure indefinitely. The outcome means the House cannot again take up the question at this session.

The maneuver to kill the measure was in the form of a motion to postpone indefinitely because the bill, at amendment stage, had not yet reached third reading, the normal time for a passage vote.

The Senate's Finance Committee already had killed that chamber's own version of the proposed severance levy on natural resource production, without letting it get to the Senate floor.

Before the House wrote off the controversial measure for good, it adopted amendments offered by its own Finance Committee to provide exemptions up to certain production levels as a concession to smaller producers of coal, oil, gas and other natural resources.

The House shouted down on another voice vote an amendment by which Del. Francis (D-Kanawha) tried to have the severance tax bill provide also for repeal of the soft drink tax enacted at the 1951 session.

Four million dollars of the estimated 17 million dollars a year which the amended severance tax bill would have raised, was to have been earmarked for establishment and operation of the West Virginia University medical school. The soft drink tax now supports that project.

Progress Noted On Interference With TV Signals

Meeting Planned Next Wednesday

Leaders of Cumberland's television industry will meet next Wednesday at 2 p. m. at City Hall to discuss TV interference problems with an expert of the Radio Corporation of America.

Plans for the meeting were made Wednesday afternoon when officials of the Federal Communications Commission met with representatives of local industries affected by television.

J. Holland Rannells, president of the Potomac Valley Television Company, said Roy Abbott, of RCA's Antennaplex division, will be here Tuesday and Wednesday to make tests of the cable equipment, which FCC tests show is causing some of the interference on TV signals received over antennas.

Reduce Interference

Harry G. Grimes, district line superintendent of the Potomac Edison Company, said the firm cleaned insulators on high tension lines Sunday and that tests indicate power line interference dropped 60 per cent. He promised the firm will continue to work on the problem.

Two FCC officials, H. A. Cohen, engineer in charge of FCC District 4, and A. G. Gilbert, district FCC radio engineer, reported some of the sources of the up to 200 complaints received from here result from interference from cable amplifiers, but that other sources, such as power line and electrical appliances, are also causing some of the trouble.

Will Continue Work

The dealers, who must try to eliminate the complaints from sets they sell, agreed that better shielding, now being undertaken by the cable firm, will help.

They added that when cable leakage is cut to a minimum,, many of the sets now being operated will be of little use, without a cable, since the only signals their antennas pick up are from the cable.

Mayor Roy W. Eves, who called the meeting, praised the cooperation of all the business firms trying to solve the signal interference problem.

FCC officials said some of the complaints received from here are justified and that agency will continue to work on Cumberland's television problems until a solution is found.

The new single plate, which must be attached to the rear of the automobile, must be on by midnight Tuesday, March 31.

City Will Begin Clearwell Repair This Morning

Damaged Section To Be Sealed Off

Repairs on the clearwell of the city's water filtration plant will get under way today, William J. Edwards, commissioner of water and electric light, announced last night.

Plans for the rehabilitation of the clearwell, which was damaged Wednesday night when the bottom fell out of the 40-year-old structure, were made yesterday at a conference of city officials with Robert T. Regester, consulting engineer for the city on repairs to the water system.

Commissioner Edwards said the George F. Hazelwood Company, which is constructing six new filters at the dam, will begin installing a retaining wall in the damaged clearwell this morning.

Foundation Undermined

He said investigation showed there was no way to find a firm foundation under the structure. The foundation has been undermined by a leak of several years standing, which officials said has resulted in the loss of about 3,000,000 gallons of water a day.

Officials said it will not be necessary to use the clearwell when the new filters, which have a rated capacity of 6,000,000 gallons a day, are completed. The clearwell is a 375,000 gallon reservoir used to store filtered water which is fed into transmission lines.

While the exact location of the leak was not known, water plant employes had their suspicions that it was in the vicinity of the clearwell, the commissioner stated.

The Water Department officials decided to wait until the additional filters were built before excavating around the clearwell to find the leak, Commissioner Edwards explained.

This work is practically complete, he pointed out, and the exploration had been on the immediate work agenda.

The clearwell was not made of reinforced concrete when it was constructed 40 years ago, the commissioner said. As a result when the water undermined the bottom of it, the whole concrete slab dropped.

Use Old Line

When the 375,000-gallon pond went out of commission Wednesday, George M. Hitchcock, superintendent of the Evitts Creek Water Company, and his assistant, C. L. Brotemarkle, had water cut off leading into it with a valve just installed last week.

Then the water was directed from the filters into the old 36-inch main. Edwards said the department expected the water to be cloudy yesterday, but checks in various parts of the city did not reveal this condition.

The old line had only been used partially the commission said, and when any sudden surge of water is applied to it, there is an inevitable amount of sediment washed off the inner wall.

Yesterday Hitchcock had his employes at the water plant hauling away in two trucks, debris from the side of the clearwell and removing it from the concrete roadway leading to the filtration plant.

The force of the escaping water uprooted a large tree on the hillside, the commissioner said.

Alban C. Thompson, magistrate at Allegany County Juvenile Court, gave a talk before Carver High School students yesterday morning explaining the functions and purpose of Juvenile Court here.

Magistrate Thompson pointed out that the court was not a place to punish the child but rather to help him. He explained the benefits of individuality in groups and listed the endeavors of the court to aid juvenile delinquents physically and psychologically.

Thompson also noted that Carver High School has a higher attendance record than any other school in the county, and it has kept that record for the past two years.

Short-Circuit Causes Fire Scare

Central firemen were called to the Liberty Trust Building yesterday at 2 p. m. when an electrical short circuit caused smoke to fill a third-floor room.

Firemen and Potomac Edison power company workers had difficulty tracing the source through the building's complex wiring system, but it was finally located in a fluorescent light starter, about three hours later.

There was no blaze and no damage resulted from the short circuit.

Central company also answered a false alarm at 5:48 p. m. at the Sloan Glass Company off Market Street. Firemen said an outside box had been pulled, but that there was no fire.

Many Errors Show Up In Tax Returns

The Internal Revenue Bureau in Baltimore reports it already has received about 700,000 federal income tax returns and there has been something obviously wrong with at least 68,000 of them.

The Baltimore office handles returns from Maryland and the District of Columbia.

About 20,000 of the 68,000 faulty returns haven't been signed properly, L. A. Chamberlin, internal revenue director for the area, reported.

The common defect is failure of both husband and wife to sign a joint return, as is required by the income tax law.

But some taxpayers send in returns they haven't signed at all.

The next most common error is failure to send in the withholding statement supplied to workers by their employers.

So far, the bureau has found 248,000 returns from taxpayers who are entitled to refunds, about $15,137,000 worth of refunds. The largest so far this year is $10,000 and the smallest 20 cents.

Refunds of less than a dollar are not made unless the taxpayer insists upon it.

Deadline for the returns on 1952 income is March 15.

Landing Device To Be Tested At Local Port

CAA Will Run Checks On TVOR Equipment

The Civil Aeronautics Administration will conduct tests of TVOR landing equipment at the Cumberland Municipal Airport the last week of March, Mayor Roy W. Eves was advised yesterday.

The city is considering installing the plane landing system, known as terminal visual omnirange, so planes can land and take off in fog and inclement weather, cutting overflights of commercial planes resulting from CAA requirements of a 2,500 foot ceiling and visibility of two miles.

C. F. Horne, CAA administrator, told city officials the federal agency can make portable TVOR equipment available for tests here the last week of this month.

Horne said the test flights will be made as soon as the equipment can be set up and that by the first week in April, the CAA will be able to provide the city with the information it needs concerning the homing device.

He commended the city for its efforts toward real aviation progress in the Cumberland area.

At hearings before the CAB in connection with Allegany Airlines attempt to drop service to Cumberland, city officials promised that a landing system would be installed if service continued, and that efforts would be made to keep runways clear of ice and snow.

A heavy duty truck was purchased for the runway clearing work.

Dr. Ballin Will Hold Chest Clinics

Dr. Ralph W. Ballin will conduct chest clinics for the Allegany County Health Department, Dr. Winter R. Frantz, county health officer, announced yesterday.

City May Send Civil Service Bill To Assembly

Seek To Iron Out Basic Differences

Unless a compromise can be reached, the City of Cumberland may submit its own proposal for a new Civil Service Bill to the General Assembly.

An attempt was made yesterday, at a meeting of the Mayor and Council and the Civil Service Commission with Thomas N. Berry, attorney for the Police and Firemen's Welfare Association, and Local 812, Municipal Workers Union, to agree on a bill which could be submitted jointly.

A bill sponsored by the two employe groups was presented to Senator Robert B. Kimble Tuesday after revisions were made during a lengthy meeting with city officials. This bill is being printed, officials said, and has not undergone official action.

Yesterday, the Mayor and Council and the Board discussed with Berry the 13 page bill prepared by Thomas B. Finan, city solicitor. It represents revisions made following joint meetings of the Mayor and Council and the Civil Service Board and subsequent revisions worked out by Finan and Berry.

Concepts Are Different

One of the major disagreements is in the scope of the bill. The city insists the Bill should deal with the creation of a Civil Service Board, appointments of employes, rules, classification of workers, examinations, promotions, discharges and the like.

The employe groups want the bill also to include provisions on wages, vacation and sick leave, overtime and holidays, tenure and compensation for injuries and would classify heart disease as an occupational injury for firemen

The city says these issues are part of the city's contract with its employes and should be made and modified from time to time by the Mayor and Council and not incorporated into the basic Civil Service Law.

Conference Planned

City officials insist a Civil Service Bill is not intended to be a labor contract but to set up a Civil Service system and provide for its administration.

Berry reports the men want a comprehensive law which will include all of the legislation, much of it obsolete, now included in the bills affecting Civil Service and the Classified Service.

It was agreed that the city and the men are "not too far apart" on the law if the working conditions are omitted.

Yesterday's meeting ended with Berry promising to consult the workers about compromises asked by the city, and with city officials tentatively agreeing that the city's bill will be sent to Annapolis if the compromises cannot be worked out.

Files Petition Seeking Appeal

Walter Scott, this city, through Attorney John M. Robb, has filed a petition in Allegany County Circuit Court asking the court to issue a writ of mandamus requesting Juvenile Court Magistrate Alban C. Thompson to enter an appeal in his case and to certify the papers in the case to the clerk of Circuit Court.

Associate Judge George Henderson has signed an order directing Magistrate Thompson to show cause within 10 days why the mandamus should not be issued.

Attorney Robb sets forth in the petition that Scott was found guilty by Magistrate Thompson February 6 on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of his minor children and was sentenced to one year in the Maryland House of Correction. This was suspended providing Scott refrains from drinking and is of good behavior.

Subsequently, Scott decided to appeal the conviction to Circuit Court. Robb wrote to Magistrate Thompson requesting entry of the appeal. The attorney said that Thompson wrote "unless bond of $500 is filed there will be no appeal."

Robb charges that no bond is required in the case and Scott should be entitled to appeal as a matter of right.

Optimists Witness Spinning Of Celanese At Luncheon

Celanese yarn was spun outside a Celanese plant for the first time in history Wednesday night at Central YMCA.

The occasion was the weekly dinner-meeting of the Optimist Club of Cumberland. Jack Hancox, an assistant superintendent in the Spinning Division at the Amcelle plant, was explaining acetate yarn production.

During his talk, he picked up an arrangement resembling a grease gun about 18 inches long, turned a crank and spun a length of yarn.

It all looked very simple by contrast with the complex machinery which daily turns out tons of yarn at Amcelle and several other of the Celanese Corporation's plants.

But Hancox knew exactly what he was doing. He has been at Amcelle ever since the first continuous filament acetate yarn was spun in the United States on December 25, 1924, at Amcelle.

A naturalized U. S. citizen who came here from England to set up the first American Celanese plant, Hancox is a longtime expert on spinning technicalities.

So it was fairly easy for him to rig up the single-jet grease gun arrangement which he used in the demonstration.

He used a special spinning solution which he prepared himself, and special oils. The operation, said another celanese official, was just like that at the plant except that the yarn did not solidify completely as it was spun, because no heat cabinet was used.

Until he showed it to the Optimists, Hancox wasn't even sure how well the gadget would work. He had tried it only once, in his office at Amcelle.
